THE MUSE. An April Morn. One April morn I heard a I knew not what it wuxx; It seemed a low mellifluo

Approaching to a burz. When first its music smote my ear. \
It made my spirit quali;
Thinks I. "Now can that be the whizz
Of the passing comet's tail?" Twas Friday morn a it was dark.
And I lay still abed:
I thought of that there comet's tall
And covered up my head.

And, oh! The dreams I dreamed were not Of gladness or of mirth; I dreamed that comet lashed its tail
And wiped me off the earth. At last came daylight—I arose, And still I heard the buzz; I, trembling, dressed myself— for I Knew not where the irouble

But when I picked the Daily To see what I could see.
The buzzer proved to be inside;
It was a Bumble Bec. The Big Stick.

The connubial state
Has "got in bad" of late;
For extinction we seem to be ready,
Who cries, "Sell your motors!
Produce future voters!"
Our own patriotic friend
Teddy,

Halley's comet draws near.
We all feel somewhat queer—
Have need of assurance already.
"Folks, don't be alarfned,
We'll get by utharmed,"
Cries our undaunted protector, Teddy.

I guess that you know it al-ready.
