The spring brides are dividing honors with charity in the attention of those who have time and the means to entertain and be entertained. Half a dozen benefit performances have been given of late by young women and children and as many are planned for the next few weeks.

But the brides-to-be are having their full share. They have inspired most of the affairs of the last week and will be honor guests at many of the larger things planned for the spring.

The men may not talk so much about styles in hats as the women, but they go Friday at the Omaha club, followed by a as much trouble to find out what is the latest hint from New York. Several young men recently went to nearly every haberdasher in the city to find an exact duplicate of a style worn by two or three eastern visitors to this city. The atmosphere of strict formality which marks the state receptions and other events of the regular season are not in evidence at those parties, and the president and Mrs. Taft have opp dunity for more than a word with their guests.

From the attitude of Mrs. Taft and other social leaders and the clergy of Washington it is quite likely. I believe, that a crusade of serious proportions is in store against cigarette smoking, drinking and gaming among the society women of Washington. For some time Mrs. Taft has been frowning upon the inroads of the continental Sunday in this city, but the alarming growth of the eigarette habit amongst society women and the openness in which Many social entertainments are being tendered Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie it is being indulged has aroused a great deal of antagonistic feeling.

For instance, when a congressman from ome rural district brings his family to Washington and his wife and daughters destroyed with fire and flood before many more hours has elapsed. In this connection a rather humorous incident happened a performance of the historical tableaux which was attended by President Taft and "I've lost 'Kittens."
