The perjury charge against Wilson is based on his testimony given before the members of the grand jury May 5. The grand jury states in its investigation that it finds that Wilson did hand money to both White and Beckemeyer in St. Louis on the date specified.

Danville Mines Still Scenes of Great Disorder

Trouble May Be Further Aggravated by Reopening of Saloons—Troops Still on Guard.

DEATH AFFECTS POLITICS

Demise of King Edward Comes at Critical Period in Legislation.

LONDON, May 7.—In a stormy meeting of miners of Westville today, every effort to effect conciliation was blocked by a small faction composed, the mine owners say of men who have but recently come into the district. A number of violent speeches were made by such agitators and when the gathering finally broke up toward evening no advance had been made. About 200 men attended the meeting.

The saloon question remains a matter that is getting the authorities much concerned. Although today was the date on which, under the result of the recent election, the liquor places were allowed to reopen after having been closed for two years, only two or three of the owners took advantage of the opportunity.

LIBERALS' PROGRAM NOW UP

Public Opinion May Demand that Proposed Plan to Reform House of Lords Be Laid Aside.

LONDON, April 7.—Public opinion will doubtless demand that the liberal program for reforming the House of Lords, with a possible appeal to the crown to make the most important recession a sovereign has been called on to take in many years, shall be laid aside for a long time. They would be opposed to thrusting upon King Edward's successor at the very beginning of his reign, when he was first grappling with important routine work, a question so vital to the future of the empire.

Throughout the eight years of King Edward's reign, tariff reform versus free trade, which was inaugurated by the famous Chamberlain speech in May, 1903, has been continuously under discussion. The friends of the tariff, under the leadership of the long Salisbury administration and the accession of Balfour to the premiership. On his accession to the throne before the privy council, the king announced his intention to walk in his mother's footsteps.

Refusal to Stay in Bed Hastens the King's Death

Monarch Insisted on Transacting Business of State on Very Day Summons Came.

DUN'S REVIEW OF TRADE

Apprehensive Feeling in Industrial Lines Somewhat Alleviated.

LONDON, May 7.—The king refused to remain in bed yesterday morning. He insisted upon getting up to transact business of state as usual with his secretary, facing his illness with courage and determination. He had numerous attacks of choking and coughing and one bad paroxysm of coughing in the forenoon. The paroxysms recurred frequently in the afternoon until evening when the attacks took the form of failure of breath.

Although the king fagged into a comatose condition he remained sitting up and oxygen was freely administered. It was about 10 o'clock when Mrs. Laking and Field conveyed to the queen, the prince of Wales and other members of the family, who were waiting in adjoining rooms, the tragic tidings that there was no hope and that death was a mere matter of time. The king was then partly conscious and soon afterwards rallied sufficiently to recognize the queen and his son.

BUOYANT MOVEMENT CHECKED

Reserve Buying Power in Dry Goods Circles Noticed at Auction Sales—Yarns Rule Slow.

NEW YORK, May 7.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade today says: The unsettled and apprehensive feeling prevailing for some time in the financial markets, resulting in declining prices, has been alleviated to some extent, although there has been a disappointing check to the buoyant movement existing in mercantile lines at the beginning of the year. The causes of the financial recession were partly economic, partly political. It is to be noted, however, that the effect upon the industrial and mercantile situations has been slow and in some parts of the country it was hardly noticeable.

In dry goods circles considerable reserve buying power was disclosed at the auction sale of carpets that attracted buyers from west and south.
