Queer Arguments

TOO NEAR BRIDGEPORT.
How absurd, when you consider that South Omaha was started after Omaha was a city of nearly 100,0000. There is Benson which has grown to a little city of 3,000 people and is within a stone's throw f Omaha. Havelock, at the edge of Lincoln, is good example of what a railroad can do in building up a manufacturing city.

NORTHPORT HAS TWO

RAILROADS.

The Burlington station at Bridgeport i only a little over a mile from Northport.
This gives the new town the advantage of competition in freight rates.
The rivairy between the two towns will make business grow. The pride each town will have in its own growth will make them both good towns. Northport is to have a

When she returned from Europe five years ago she became interested in Beer beera Mitchell, sister of King Gorgo, With her gypsy friend she visited the camp. Life in the open air appealed to Jessie Mitchell as life in the woods appeals to a captive bird. Slight anaemic, nervous, highly strung, the open air was what she needed. She did not know it then, she does not know it now, but had she continued to live indoors she would have died of nervousness.

Met King Gorgo So unconsciously she, like Hilda Wangel, followed her "troll." She lived in the gypsy camp for some time with Beerbeera Mitchell. The life quieted her strung nerves. She was restful and happy. Then at this most opportune moment Gorgo Mitchell, lean, swarthy, smiling, human and natural, came on the scene. His gentle ways and straightforward manner won the young daughter of the south. And they were married and have lived deliriously happy ever since. "We gypsies do not marry in haste, said King Gorgo, who, unable to read, served for a long time before I married her. I saw that she was a natural gypsy, her husband in a manner that transformed , a natural bird of the forest and of the the quiet dinning room into a prize fight fields. I wished to liberate this bird and to ring. restore her to the life that civilization have never had reason to regret it. She terribly hurt and mortified." tells me she has had none, either."
