SEE SOUTH POLE NEXT YEAR

Sir Earnest Shackleton Says Captain Scott Will Accomplish Feat.

FIXES THE TIME TO A WEEK

British Naval Officer Who Reached Point of Earliest South in Omaha—Pays Visit to Port Omaha.

Lieutenant Sir Earnest Shackleton, formerly of the British royal navy and the man with the "farthest south" record, says that he expects the south pole will be discovered by Captain Scott of England on or about December 22, 1911.

When asked why he set this date as the time the discovery would be made, he said: "That will be at the height of summer in the south polar regions and I feel that Captain Scott will reach the goal within a week of December 22, 1911. I am confident that he will get it, but should he fail, I will go after it again myself and I'll get it. However, I do not anticipate that I will be obliged to make another journey into the south polar regions. Captain Scott sails from England the first of next June and will leave New Zealand in November, so he ought to be able to reach the pole at the time I have indicated."

Lieutenant Shackleton arrived in Omaha Friday morning from Sioux City at 10:30. His train was ten minutes ahead of time and the reception committee which was to meet him at the Union station had not arrived. He expressed himself as being better pleased than had been a delegation at the station to pay him honor. He was glad to escape from anything which flavored of formality and took a cab for the Henshaw hotel.

Point Earliest South.

In 1901 Lieutenant Shackleton reached the point 22 1/2 south, but on his last trip in 1909 he beat his own record and went as far as 88 1/2, which he claims is the biggest jump ever made in polar explorations. Speaking of the expense connected with the trip, he said: "I carried the baby myself. I had no support from the government and by getting some of my influential friends to stand back of me I borrowed enough money to make the trip. My last journey to the south cost about $17,000. When I returned the Parliament thought that my scientific discoveries were worth recognition and gave me $100,000, which enabled me to pay off the greater portion of my expenses."

"Since last November I have been lecturing and writing and I have cleared off $60,000 more of the debt. I am working now to square the whole account. Many people imagine that I am getting fabulously rich, but as a matter of fact I am only paying my bills and am not clear yet."

When questioned concerning the rate of speed he traveled while in the polar regions, he said: "The best day I ever had was when I made twenty-nine and a half miles. That day we put sails on our sledges and made fine headway, and I think that the worst day I had in the matter of covering distance was when I only succeeded in making a headway of 600 yards. We worked hard that day from 7 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock at night. In reality we covered a much greater distance, but we had to go over the route several times to move our entire camp along with us. Another day we only made three miles in fourteen hours."

Research Work in Canada.

Lieutenant Shackleton will leave here for Lincoln and then he will return east and north to Canada. He expects to return to England on June 1 and after a few months' stay at his home, he plans on returning to Canada in October to take up research work and explorations for private business concerns. He will take with him many of the scientific men who accompanied him on his last trip south. He said that he has attended a number of base ball games and enjoys the game. He says that it is very scientific, but that it will never make headway in England, where cricket has a strong hold. Cricket, he declared, gives more chances for individual honor and is quite popular on that account.

"King Edward," he said, while discussing the death of England's late ruler, "was a good friend of mine and his loss will be felt throughout the entire country, but George has taken hold of the reins and will make a good king. He is a strong character and has been trained for the position he now occupies."

The Palimpsest club gave Lieutenant Shackleton a luncheon at the Omaha club Friday afternoon at 1:30 and he was entertained during the day by the Military club of the Department of the Missouri headquarters. Friday evening he took dinner at the Henshaw in company with a number of the leading citizens of the city. The lecture Friday night to his last trip to the south will be held in the Auditorium and will be illustrated with stereoscopic views and moving pictures taken during the journey south. He will be introduced to the people of Omaha by John Lee Webster, president of the Palimpsest club.

NEBRASKANS PLAN TO GREET RETURNING HUNTER

Major Gaylor of New York Writes that the Antelope State Will Be Cared For.

Word was received from Major Gaylor of New York City, Friday morning by the publicity bureau of the Commercial club that a place would be granted to Nebraska for a representation of its citizens to greet Colonel Theodore Roosevelt when he landed in New York on his return from his trip abroad. Not only will the Nebraskans be given a prominent place in line, but they will be given a band for the occasion.

Efforts will be made by the Ak-Sar-Ben board to get a representation for Nebraska that will place the state in the foremost ranks of those that will greet the ex-president.

Louis Hostwick and Joseph Barker will make a canvass of the state as soon as the Omaha trade boosters return from their trip through South Dakota and Nebraska to ascertain just how many will take the trip to New York.

Arrangements will be made for the supply of horses from one of the largest riding academies in the east for the Nebraska contingent. There will be no hobbled horses, but every steed will resemble as much as possible the horses seen and used on Nebraska's plains.

It is planned that on the return trip, the party will visit Washington. Already more than forty have signified their intentions of taking the trip and it is expected that there will be little difficulty in securing enough Nebraskans to make up a sufficient number for a special train.

Old Spite Suit Comes to Naught

Action Against Justice Cockrell is Dismissed by Judge Sutton in District Court.

A "spite suit" against George C. Cockrell, justice of the peace, was dismissed by Judge Sutton in district court Friday for want of prosecution. The suit, in which Charles Burdge was plaintiff, was in the nature of impeachment proceedings and accused Judge Cockrell of withholding moneys belonging to clients. It was filed just before the republican primaries last summer and was then believed to have been brought about for election purposes. If so, it failed of its purpose and was not heard of again until now, when T. W. Blackburn, attorney for Mr. Cockrell, called the court's attention to the fact that Burdge was not moving in the matter. Judge Sutton then dismissed the case.

ARGUMENTS IN KHARAS CASE

Friday is Given Over to the Lawyers Who Try to Keep Evidence from Jury.

All of Friday forenoon was taken up in the Kharas case in arguments on the motion of the defense to exclude certain government exhibits, correspondence and printed matter sent out and issued by Kharas and the several movable car sign companies in which he was interested. Judge Munger sustained the motion in some instances, rejected it in others and reserved his decision in others.

The jury was given a recess until 2 o'clock pending the arguments. Further argument was had upon the motion to instruct the jury in favor of the defense.

HEART DISEASE KILLS BABE

Autopsy on Body of Grimm Infant Reveals Cause of Its Sudden Death.

It was disclosed at a post-mortem held by Coroner Crosby over the body of the little babe, Richard Grimm, who died Thursday morning at the home, 3005 Charles street, that death was due to acute dilation of the heart. When the mother discovered that her little 1-year-old son was dying she ran screaming to the neighbors with the boy in her arms. Just before she picked him up he had been laughing and cooing in babyish prattle on the floor.

OLDEST INHABITANTS MEET

Henry T. Clarke and Uncle Joe Redman Talk Early Days.

BONUS OFFERED FOR TAVERN

Omaha Proposed to Give $62,000 for Erection of $15,000 Hotel—Frivolous Youth of Eighty is Repealed.

Henry T. Clarke and Uncle Joe Redman, two of the very oldest settlers now left in Omaha, indulged in a reminiscent discussion this morning. The subject of the talk was an article published in a St. Paul paper last Saturday under the head, "Forty Years Ago Today."

The article said: "Omaha offers a bonus of $2,000 in lands and money to any one putting up a $15,000 hotel."

Neither Clarke or Redman can recall exactly if any one picked up the fat bonus, and neither could they agree which hotel, if any, resulted from the advertisement. Mr. Clarke did know that he went and saw James E. Kitchen, then conducting a hotel at St. Joseph, Mo.

"Kitchen did not know whether a four-story tavern would pay in Omaha," said Mr. Clarke, "but after a while he came and looked the ground over, and later the Paxton hotel was built."

"Yes, and Bill Paxton put the fifth story on the building," said Uncle Joe.

S. C. Barnes here interrupted to say something about the old Merzonn house.

Repeal for "Youth."

"Young man, you keep still," said Mr. Clarke to Barnes, who is something over 80. "You weren't here in those days."

Young Mr. Barnes subsided, as he smilingly stroked his patriarchal white beard.

"Yes, Barnes, you should not get into this discussion," said Redman, "because we'll take you back so far you'll be lost."

Then Uncle Joe resumed a moment and continued: "Land in those days was worth 50 cents an acre, and if any man got $25,000 worth and hung onto it he could build a good many hotels today. But I don't think anybody took up that offer. If they did I don't recall it."

"That story is probably like the one which said Henry T. Clarke lost a railroad for Bellevue by stopping to change his shirt," said Mr. Clarke, with just a touch of sarcasm, "whereas at that time I was in the mountains."

Then the two fathers of Omaha began to bear tribute to the worth of "Bill" Paxton, Dr. George L. Miller and Ezra Millard.

Lawyer Fined; is Sent to Jail

Henry E. Plummer Found Guilty of Obtaining Money Fraudulently in Police Court.

Entangled in a network of complications over the collection of $10 from a real estate client, Henry V. Plummer, the colored police court attorney who was recently barred from practicing in the court, was found guilty of obtaining money under false pretenses and fined $25 and costs by Judge Crawford Friday morning. Judge Crawford denounced Plummer in the same scathing terms he had used when several months ago he ordered the negro to forever cease from appearing in court.

A colored woman giving the name of Mrs. Warner was complaining witness against the former attorney, in the real estate tangle. She testified that she had deposited $10 with him to secure a house for her occupancy, and that while deputies of the court and she herself had made frequent efforts to have the money refunded, upon Plummer's failure to secure the house, he failed to make good on the obligation. Plummer bewitched the court with a defense covering detailed conversations he had had with the woman and with an explanation that he had been unable to repay the money she had given him.

"You are not fooling anybody," announced the judge when Plummer apparently had finished his defense. Plummer was unable to pay his fine and was placed in jail, where he remained for several hours.

Many Women Ask for Their Freedom

Several Divorce Suits Filed in Which the Plaintiffs Are All Women.

Mrs. Antonie Swoboda is to have the exclusive care and custody of her children who are Anna, Frank, Mary, Joseph, Josephine, Charles, Helen, Antone, Bessie and Stanley Swoboda. The father of the ten, Joseph Swoboda, is adjudged by district court to have been unfaithful to Mrs. Swoboda, who is given an absolute decree of divorce. "Mrs. Voelk" is named in the decree as the co-respondent.

A decree is given Mrs. Ellen E. Coats from Clarence Coates, declared to be an habitual drunkard, and Mrs. Josephine Keap gets one from Frederick Keap for non-support. Mrs. Edna Butler is also freed from marital bonds by district court, from James Butler.

New divorce suits are filed by Mrs. Anna Weiss against Eugene Weiss and by Winifred Daley against William Allen Daley. In all of these cases the plaintiffs are women.

BIG SUM FOR FALSE ARREST

Ralph O. Urban Gets Judgment for Thirty-Five Hundred Against W. F. Williams.

Ralph O. Urban was given a verdict for $3,500 before Judge Redick in the district court this morning for false arrest by W. F. Williams, manager of the C. F. Adams company.

Williams was sued jointly with the Adams company, but the plaintiff dismissed the case against the company and continued his suit against Williams. Friday morning the jury gave him a verdict for $3,500.

NO PEACE FOR WANDERER

Harry Alsop Arrested Within Two Minutes of His Discharge in Court.

Two minutes after he had been dismissed on the charge of petit larceny, Harry Alsop, a defendant on no permanent address, was rearrested for vagrancy just as he was walking to liberty through the police station door Friday morning. Alsop had been arraigned three times during the week under the charge of having robbed Mrs. J. A. Yost of $31, and was finally dis-
