BRANDEIS PRESENTS PLEA

Attorney for Ballinger "Prosecution" Speaks for Two Hours.

SAYS SECRETARY IS UNSAFE

Insists Evidence Shows that He Cannot Be Depended Upon to Carry Forward the Policy of Conservation.

financially. The struggle to establish that every American is entitled to equal justice in the public service as well as in the courts—that no official is so highly stationed that he may trample indifferently and unjustly upon even the humblest American citizen. The cause of Glavis is the cause of the common people and more especially the cause of hundreds of thousands of government officials.

Chronology of Coal Claims.
Mr. Brandeis gave a chronological resume of the Alaska coal land situation from the time the Cunningham claims were first filed upon in 1906. He laid particular stress upon the contention that Mr. Ballinger as commissioner of the land office was fully acquainted with the situation and personally directed the procedure in the land office whereby the claims were scrutinized. He declared that of 461 Alaska coal claimants whose addresses were secured by special agents early in the investigation, 355 appeared to be residents of the Pacific coast and 104 lived in Seattle, Ballinger's home city.

"Among these claimants were the men of greatest influence in the state, financially and politically, and among these were friends and associates of Mr. Ballinger," said the attorney. "While these Pacific coast claimants remained undisturbed by further inquiries into the validity of their claims, most of the others, those residing in Illinois and Michigan, were, on September 24, 1907, directed to be thoroughly investigated. Was it a coincidence that the investigations of Special Agent Jones in the summer of 1909 into the Cunningham claims stopped shortly after the settlement returned to Seattle, shortly after the settlement between the Morgan-Guggenheim Alaska syndicate and the Cunningham claimants which rendered an early issue of the patents important? Was it a coincidence that an active inquiry was undertaken into the claims of residents of Illinois and Michigan?"

Mr. Ballinger's Trip East.
Proceedings to the clear listing of the Cunningham claims in 1907, Mr. Brandeis said that the suspension of the order after Glavis' protest was evidently done by Ballinger with the idea that ultimately the patents should be granted when "this uncomfortable obstacle presented by Glavis' intervention should be overcome." When the case bill, which Brandeis said Ballinger had drafted to overcome that obstacle, failed and the law of May 28, 1908, was enacted, "Lawyer" Ballinger was appealed to for aid, not only by Clarence Cunningham, but by "Ballinger's influential friend, J. C. Smith, the senator maker."

He said Ballinger then drew the Cunningham obviously in irreconcilable conflict with the terms of the then existing agreement with the Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate of July 20, 1907. He referred to Ballinger's trip east to see "his old friend, Garfield," and "his friend and protégé, Dennett," on behalf of the Cunningham claimant.

"Why did Ballinger do that?" he asked. "He says that these were not strictly legal services. If they were not, so much the worse. Was this, then, an attempt to capitalize his friendship with Garfield and with Dennett; to capitalize and influence necessarily attending his recent incumbency in office; to capitalize the knowledge he had acquired while filling the important office of land commissioner?"

Violation of Professional Ethics.
"He says he was unwilling to undertake this land office work and that he rather unexpectedly received only reimbursement of his traveling expenses. If this be so, so much the worse." If against his will and without expectation of compensation, he undertook this service for such men as Charles J. Smith, Charles Sweeney, Henry and ex-Governor Moore, then it must have been because their will was law to him. Under their potent influence, Mr. Ballinger forgot the rules of professional ethics as he forgot the rules of the land department over which he has presided and by which he was barred for two years after his retirement from practicing before it.

"Is such a man a safe trustee for the people's property?" he demanded.
Mr. Brandeis said that when Glavis appealed to Ballinger to postpone hearings on the Cunningham cases until after a field examination could be made, the then secretary drew "strange ethical distinctions." He said Ballinger had felt at liberty to accept the Cunningham claimants, although he had previously, as land commissioner, represented the government, but on becoming secretary he had felt barred from representing the people, because, as he expressed it, he had "incidentally acted for the Cunningham claimants."

Brandeis said that Ballinger has felt no such hesitation in hastening, at the instance of the claimants, the investigation of the Cunningham and other claims.
Glavis' Appeal for Delay.
Referring to Glavis' successful appeal to the forest service for a delay of the hearing and his being subsequently superseded by the "inexperienced" Sheridan, Brandeis said that even Sheridan agreed that a postponement was proper. "As to Mr. Ballinger's assertion that he had had nothing to do with the coal cases since he became secretary, Brandeis said: "Secretary Ballinger knew all and in effect he did all. It needed no writing signed by him to do the act. It needed no specific instructions. Those by whom he was surrounded were of the category who 'at the twinkling of authority' understand a law' and who would never prove insubordinate from over zeal for the public interest."

As indicating Mr. Ballinger's "irresolute-ness" Brandeis recited how he had acted under pressure in his various stages in the Cunningham cases, yielded to the claimants when in Seattle and later to Glavis when he returned to Washington, with the claimants 2,000 miles away.
Mr. Brandeis spoke of Ballinger's appearance on the witness stand "with its extraordinary failures of memory, misstatements and denials" and quoted from the testimony Ballinger's cross-examination by the Lawler memorandum, with the evident purpose of showing that Ballinger attempted to conceal the truth and evade his questions.

Col. Glasford to Leave Omaha For Windy City

Fort Omaha Commander of Signal Corps Transferred to Department of Lakes as Chief Officer.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27.—A Special Telegram.—Following are changes ordered in signal corps: Captain Reynolds J. Burt, relieved from duty at Fort Leavenworth, will proceed to Fort Omaha for duty; Captain Walter L. Clark, relieved from duty at Fort Leavenworth, will proceed to Fort Omaha for duty as officer in charge of signal corps general supply department, and also assume charge of construction work at Fort Omaha, relieving Captain George S. Gibbs of those duties; Major Daniel J. Carr, relieved from duty at Fort Wood, N. Y., will proceed to Omaha for duty as chief signal officer, department of Missouri and as commanding officer of the post of Fort Omaha, relieving Lieutenant Colonel William A. Glasford, who will proceed to Chicago for duty as chief signal officer, department of Lakes.

The president today sent to the senate the nomination of Thomas W. Cole as postmaster at Nelson, Neb.
Rural carriers appointed are as follows: Iowa—Moneta, O'Brien county, John W. Jepsen, vice P. F. Hensen, resigned. South Dakota—Chance, Perkins county, William Miles, vice A. J. Nelson, resigned; Rockerville, Pennington county, Ferdinand Kiefer, vice J. Grover, resigned.

Public Building Bill.
As a result of a conference he had today with President Taft, Chairman Barthold of the public buildings and grounds committee of the house gave it out that there would be a public building bill, but as to the exact amount it would carry it was impossible for him to say at this time.

Congressman Martin of South Dakota, a member of the committee, without being extremely definite as to items in the bill, guessed that Brookings, in his state, would get an appropriation of $70,000 for building and Rapid City $100,000 and that $100,000 additional would be appropriated for a public building at Sioux Falls and that the Lead public building fund would be increased by $30,000. In this connection it is understood that Senator Crawford will endeavor to get the limit of cost increased for the Huron public building.

So far as Nebraska is concerned, there will be several buildings authorized, but not having a member on the committee, Nebraska is bound to suffer some in this particular, for public buildings seem to go by favor. Grand Island undoubtedly will be provided with a public building and an increase to the Lincoln postoffice undoubtedly will be taken care of. Just what other cities in Nebraska will be favored with an appropriation for postoffice buildings is problematical.

More Rural Routes.
Postmaster General Hitchcock, who recently issued an order directing the holding up of rural free delivery routes, and who is reason of that order being condemned by the postmaster general, Nebraska likewise is interested to the extent of a dozen or more routes, which also applies to Iowa.

Thomas C. Burne and Charles H. Picketts of Omaha are in the city.
Mrs. Burckett, wife of Senator Burckett, will leave town as soon as the schools close and go to her home in Lincoln, Neb. She will not return to Washington until fall.

Announcements of the Theaters.
"Peter Pan" will close his visit at the Boyd theater with two performances today, and will end one of the biggest weeks in the history of the house. Miss Lang has given a wonderful presentation of Peter, and the company has supported her splendidly. Next week a "drama" play will be given, the charming society comedy "Sham" having been selected as the bill. This will not only give Miss Lang a chance to shine in light comedy, but will permit
