

HOUSE ADOPTS REFORM RULE

Republicans, Insurgents and Democrats Smoke Peace Pipe.

LONE MEMBER VOTES AGAINST IT

Measure Corrects Legislative Abuse of "Smothering" Legislation in Committee—Comedy Scenes Cause Meritment.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The house of representatives, which has seen many days of discussion during the present session over the question of the rules of that body, yesterday furnished the remarkable spectacle of passing, with only one lone member voting in opposition, a strongly worded "reform" rule, designed to correct an acknowledged legislative abuse—the "smothering" of legislation in committee.

Representative Hucker (dem.), the minority leader, supported the rule as a forward step in reforming the rules of the house and asserting that he himself was the author. Representative Dalsell of Pennsylvania and Representative Smith of Iowa, from among the "regular" leaders, supported it also as something which a majority of the house demanded.

"Insurgents" like Murdock of Kansas and Norris of Nebraska advocated the adoption of the rule as "another epoch in the emancipation of the house." Representative Dalsell, chairman of the committee on rules, laid the rule before the house. The measure provided for the discharge of committees from the consideration of any bill and the placing of the bill upon the calendar upon a majority vote of the entire membership of the house.

Minority Leader Clark challenged the statement that the democrats were following the rule, he said, had been brought forth by the democrats. "I introduced this rule in this house myself," he said. "The only substantial amendment to it was made by Underwood of Alabama."

"The business of the house," he continued, "has been more orderly since the 15th of March, when the speaker was removed from the committee on rules. If this rule does not work well, we will change it."

Obtaining five minutes to oppose the rule, Mr. Rucker of Missouri declared that he would not accept the proposition because it had the support of the republicans. "If you should find the republicans steering toward heaven, would you refuse to go that way?" he asked Mr. Stanley of Kentucky, amid shouts and laughter.

"If I saw them going that way I would doubt like the devil if they were going to heaven," retorted Mr. Rucker. Representative Hayes of California and Representative Fish of New York spoke in favor of the new rule. Then came Mr. Sherley (dem.) of Kentucky and offered an impassioned plea favoring the rule.

Mr. Murdock of Kansas, uncompromising insurgent, scarcely looked at the speaker as he took his place in front of the members with his back to the speaker, and told them the new rule would prevent absenteeism, would do away with the practice of pigeon-holing proposed legislation, and would take from the speaker the arbitrary right of recognizing members on suspension day.

Representative Norris of Nebraska said the new rule did not go far enough to suit him. Step by step, he said, power had been taken from the speaker, and now another step in that same direction was being taken.

The previous question being demanded, a rising vote showed practically every member upon his feet. Speaker Cannon attempted to count the members standing, but made only a few strokes of the handle of his gavel toward them when, in apparent despair, and amid laughter, he announced that "201 members voted in the affirmative," and later announced "one in the negative." This was Representative Rucker of Missouri.

VETERAN ENGINEER JUST LAID TO REST

L. O. FARRINGTON.

L. O. Farrington, a veteran Union Pacific engineer, who was buried at North Platte on Thursday, was born in Calhoun county, Vermont, March 12, 1840. His first railroad was in 1854, when he entered the service of the M. & N. Indiana, as a newsboy, left there in February, 1855, and commenced firing a locomotive out of Galesburg, Ill., on the C. B. & Q., the same month. He was promoted to locomotive engineer on C. B. & Q., out of Galesburg on July 4, 1858, and ran there until the spring of 1860, when he entered the employ of the H. & St. J., running between Hannibal and St. Joseph, until the latter part of July, 1862. He came to Omaha on July 30, 1865, was employed as locomotive engineer. Mr. Farrington brought engine "General McPherson" from St. Joseph to Omaha on the steam boat "Colorado." This was the second engine brought to Omaha. He put this engine together and on track and commenced running August 3, 1865. At this time there were but one and one-half miles of track built out of Omaha. Mr. Farrington was in the continuous employ of the Union Pacific from August, 1865, to February, 1867, with the exception of 1870 and 1871, when he was running on the C. B. & Q. between Galesburg and Quincy, Ill. In February, 1868, he retired from active service and was placed on the pension roll of the Union Pacific company. He was one of the charter members of Division 88, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, when it was organized in Grand Island in July, 1867.

Mr. Farrington was running on the H. & St. J. all during the war and took the first train load of soldiers to the battle of Monroe. The rebels captured and burned the entire train of nine cars, he getting away by cutting the engine off the train. All train men at that time were enlisted to avoid being drafted. He was a member of Company I, Thirty-eighth regiment enrollment state militia of the state of Missouri, and commissioned second lieutenant on September 2, 1862, and was honorably discharged July 27, 1864. Between above dates he was running engine continually. During this time he was shot at innumerable times, frequently a whole volley at one time, but the cab of his engine, from the roof down was protected by boiler iron, and he was never injured in this way but, once, when he was shot with buckshot in the left leg, and his hip came to his foot, and his fireman had one finger shot off at the same time. The only way shot could take effect on them was by being fired from the rear of the engine after they had passed, and it was in this way that he received this injury.

Mr. Farrington was one of the nine charter members of Division 88, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, when it was organized at Grand Island, July 15, 1867, and had been an active and continuous member until his final summons came.

Cleaverenger is Confused as Witness
Goes Through Details of Mullen Murder and Grows Greatly Excited at Cross-Examination.

MULLEN, Neb., June 18.—(Special Telegram.)—The case of the state against Harry G. McIntyre, charged with the murder of O. F. Hamilton, is progressing rapidly, although the testimony of the prosecution is not yet more than half in. There will probably be twenty witnesses yet to examine for the state, and it is estimated that about seventy will testify in behalf of McIntyre. The line of McIntyre's defense is as follows:

F. M. Cleaverenger, who made the confession of the crime, completely broke down on the witness-stand, contradicting himself many times, and it is not thought that his story will prove especially damaging toward the conviction of McIntyre.

The story of the killing of O. F. Hamilton and the secret burial of his body in a sandpit near the town of Mullen was told by Cleaverenger.

On the night of the crime, Cleaverenger declared, he went into a saloon where he had previously been a bartender. There were present Hamilton, whom he said was intoxicated and was sitting half asleep on a chair in a back room; Charles Rector, "Bob" McBride, McIntyre and himself. McIntyre, he testified, approached the sleeping Hamilton and, with a heavy revolver, struck the victim three times on the head. Hamilton, said the witness, sank to the floor with a moan, lapsed into unconsciousness and soon died. McIntyre, said Cleaverenger, turned to the witnesses of the killing and threatened them with death if they ever revealed the murder.

Cleaverenger testified he then left the saloon, returning some hours later, when McIntyre, Rector and himself took the body away and buried it.

On cross-examination Cleaverenger became confused, made contradictory statements and became so vehement in his language toward Judge Sullivan that he was admonished by the court. During his examination he was granted permission to retire, and once outside he ran away from the sheriff and was with difficulty persuaded to return to the court room.

Among the Women's Clubs

Omaha Woman Elected President of State P. E. O.—Farewell Events for Retiring General Secretary of Y. W. C. A. Begin—Omaha D. A. R. Attend Reception by Lincoln Chapter for Vice President General.

Mrs. Clara Wilson of Omaha was elected state president of the P. E. O. at the convention which was held in Edgar June 14-15-16. Mrs. Wilson formerly was state organizer and so will have to do with the work of her new office. The other officers chosen were Mrs. Helen Drake of Beatrice, first vice president; Mrs. Nina King of Edgar, second vice president; Mrs. Beale Hartigan of Hastings, recording secretary; Mrs. Lulah Andrews of Holdrege, corresponding secretary; Miss Helen Johnson of Lincoln, treasurer; Mrs. Bertha Hughes of South Omaha, organizer. The convention was most interesting, the large attendance indicating the enthusiasm of the members. Mrs. J. C. Weeth and Mrs. George Darr were delegates from the Omaha chapter. The organization, which combines literary, philanthropic and educational work, has now sixty chapters in the state of Nebraska. These were well represented at the convention, both by delegates and visitors.

Monday afternoon two of the national officers, Mrs. Winona Reeves of Keosauqua, Ia., and Mrs. Harry Peterson of Aurora, Ill., past supreme president, and the new state president, Mrs. Wilson, will be guests of honor at a reception which the South Omaha chapter gives in the home of Mrs. W. W. Fisher, 2319 P street, South Omaha, and to which the members of the Omaha and Fort Smith chapters are invited.

The board of directors of the Young Women's Christian association will give a large reception at the association building from 8 to 10 o'clock Tuesday evening, June 22, in honor of our retiring general secretary, Mrs. Emma Byers, the retiring general secretary. Mrs. Byers expects to leave the first of July for her new field of work, executive secretary of the middle west territory. The social committee, of which Mrs. G. W. Wickersham is chairman, has the entertainment in charge.

Wednesday the directors and Mrs. Byers will hold their last regular business session together. This meeting was postponed from the first of the month that as many of the directors as possible might be present. As Mrs. Byers has been at the helm of assisting matters during the last strenuous and accomplishing nine years, the farewell meeting will be exceedingly difficult for these coworkers.

The Deborah Avery chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution Friday gave a large reception in honor of Nebraska's recently elected vice president, General Mrs. A. K. Gault, of Omaha. In addition to the honor guest the Omaha chapter was represented by its regent, Mrs. J. J. Stubbs, and by Mrs. C. A. Aull, Mrs. W. A. Smith, Mrs. A. W. Clarke. Members of the Kearney, Fremont and Fairbury chapters also were present.

As Mrs. O. S. Ward, state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution has been requested to preside Thursday at the unveiling of the monument which the state historical society has erected at Bellevue, all members of the Omaha chapter are invited to be present at the ceremonies. The hour of these is 2 o'clock.

Frances Willard Women's Christian Temperance Union will give a basket picnic at Fairmont park Wednesday, June 22. All Women's Christian Temperance Union members and suffragists of Omaha and Council Bluffs are invited to participate. The picnic will meet at the Paxton hotel at 10:30 o'clock. Speakers from Omaha and Council Bluffs will address the members.

Vacation school opens tomorrow morning at the Social Settlement. This is not so strenuous as it sounds at first since summer school is not, in this instance, a striving to pick up the threads lost in the regular school studies; it is, instead, a much more interesting excursion into the fascinating mysteries of sewing, cooking, manual training and nature study. With the last study is included visits to the parks and real outings, one morning of every week.

Miss Clara Schaefer is in charge of the school. She will be assisted on different mornings by different workers. Those already enlisted as assistants are Mrs. Thomas Brown, Miss Helen Blich, Miss Louise Lord and Miss Norma Anderson.

Preparations for the open air camp for babies which the Visiting Nurse association will maintain this summer at Ninth and Bancroft streets, are progressing, and it is now hoped that the camp will be ready within two weeks. The board of directors met Wednesday and completed the plans for the work. This was to be the last meeting of the directors until September.

Mrs. M. D. D. Cameron, president of the Woman's club, expects to leave the latter part of the week for Lake Okoboj, where she will spend the summer in the Cameron bungalow "Camerolia."

The Women's Suffrage club will meet Monday afternoon with Mrs. C. P. S. Tobin, 4814 Capitol avenue, to consider the adoption of the constitution of the state organization and to formulate by-laws. The club will also consider plans for future meetings. It hopes during the summer to have local politicians speak at the meetings on Nebraska topics.

With the announcement that Miss Florence S. Kenney of Salem, Mass., would succeed Miss Frances Crittenden as assistant secretary and educational director of the roster of the Young Women's Christian association secretaries for next season's work is complete. Miss Kenney, who assumes her new duties the first of September, is at present acting general secretary of the Lansing, Mich., association, and there worked with the new general secretary, Miss Lily M. Strong, who recommended her election to the local board.

a splendid impression at the recent biennial of the Federation of Women's Clubs, has been chosen as second vice president of the National Woman Suffrage association. Mrs. Catherine Waugh McClatchy, the leading woman lawyer of Chicago and justice of the peace in Evanston, has been transferred from second vice president to first.

Superintendent of the schools of Chicago, Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, continues to put her fingers in the joints of the public school system and quite recently has called attention to widespread falling—the defects in the teaching of English. She says that much of the inadequacy of the schools comes from this defect and suggests that more time be given to more literary, philantropic and educational subject, the language of the country. Furthermore this superintendent says that she does not believe in much home work by pupils. She believes, however, that school work should be so much with the daily life of the child that it will want to talk it over at home. The time that we do not consider the work interesting enough to talk about it out of school is, she says, a criticism of the schools.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe said the other day, before the Massachusetts legislative committee which is investigating the milk question: "It seems to me that an important object, which commends itself to all good citizens. It is a matter of life and death. There is no substitute for milk in the rearing of children. There are several parties to the situation, and I think the principal party is the child in the cradle. We want this matter settled on the ground of justice and mercy, and it ought not to take very long to settle what is just to all parties, and what is merciful to one (the infant). I do want that those who produce this food for us should have suitable compensation. Justice to all parties—let us stand on that."

Members of the New Jersey branch of the National Suffrage association are planning to take active part in the coming gubernatorial campaign. The members are divided in political views and some will work for the republican nominee, while others will support the democratic candidate. The women will enter the campaign, it is announced, not only that they may support their candidate, but also to demonstrate to the public what sort of politicians women would make if they had the voting right. Both of the gubernatorial candidates are said to favor giving the women this right.

To encourage the study of thrift, the public schools' committee of the women's auxiliary of the Massachusetts Savings Insurance league has drafted a letter which is to be sent to all Massachusetts women's clubs. It calls attention to the fact that instruction in thrift is now recommended by the legislature, and that many school superintendents and principals are considering how the subject can best be presented.

Miss Elizabeth Nourse, a Cincinnati artist, has sold her painting, "The Closed Shutters," to the Luxembourg gallery, and ten years after her death it will take its place among the canvases in the Louvre. Miss Nourse began her art career in Cincinnati and studied and was encouraged by her brother-in-law, Mr. Benn Pitman, who was also an artist in wood carving, and Mr. Pitman's former pupil, Mr. Pitman's brother was Sir Isaac Pitman, the inventor of shorthand in England.

In some of the largest hospitals of the country a new line of scientific work for women has been introduced—the preparation of physicians' food prescriptions for the sick with the same skill, knowledge and exactness demanded of a chemist. The dietitian must understand and apply the theories concerning the values of food from a caloric, nutritive, and digestive standpoint; prepare the diets or superintend their preparation, assume the care and management of the diet kitchen and also deliver to student nurses regular courses of lectures on the subject which is her special department.

Any one undertaking the control of the dietetic problem of a large hospital is handling practically a private hotel filled with sick people. She is confronted with the problem of sanitation in the supervision of the kitchen, storage room and refrigerators. There is also the problem of the free patient, where the dietary must combine everything of the most nourishment for a specified amount. Then there is the private service for perhaps forty, fifty, or sixty persons, accustomed to elaborate menus in their own homes. Then there are the nurses, who carry the mental and physical burden of the hospital and to whom proper nourishment is a fight and a necessity. Added to all of these are the employees of the institution, whose physical needs must be considered in a manner to keep them efficient and contented.

The Daughters of the American Revolution, named for Emma Hart Willard, one of the best teachers in New England, and once the principal of the Troy Female seminary, will establish a diet school at the Hotel Berlin, Conn. It is said that Mrs. Russell Sage will contribute liberally towards the project.

The English suffragists held a great procession in London, Saturday, June 18, in support of their claim to the franchise. Among those taking part were Lady Constance Lytton, whose brother, the earl of Lytton, is chairman of the parliamentary committee working for the suffrage bill; Mrs. Garrett Anderson, M. D., mayor of Aldeburgh, the only woman mayor in England; Miss Beatrice Harraden, Mrs. Israel Zangwill, Mrs. George Bernard Shaw, Miss May Sinclair, a contingent of teachers, another of nurses under Florence Nightingale's banner; the young college women in caps and gowns, the doctors, women in business houses, women in government employ, an Irish contingent, a Scottish contingent, a brigade of sympathizing suffragists from all parts of the world, a band of musicians, and banners without number.

June 14, 1911, will be the 100th anniversary of the birth of Harriet Beecher Stowe, and the colored women of the country have already taken steps to have a widely celebrated among their own race. Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, one of the representative colored women of Washington, is the prime mover in the call for the celebration. She is a member of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia and president of the National Association of Colored Women. Negro children will present "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the celebration. Mrs. Terrell has sent out the call to all the colored organizations in the country.

Mrs. A. B. Ritchie, whose home is in Lincolnton, P. I., and who has spent the last several years visiting in the orient, has an interesting collection of oriental curios which she will put on exhibition this week at the B. B. building. The collection includes embroideries, metals, jewelry and china.
