Cold Storage Refrigerators

Mr. Hurd, president of the Cold Storage Refrigerator Co. and inventor of the Cold Storage Refrigerator, has done nothing for the last forty years but study refrigeration. He is a recognized authority on refrigeration. He says, if there was a refrigerator law like a pure food law, two out of every three manufacturers would either change their tactics in building refrigerators or go out of business. He also says, people who pay fabulous prices for porcelain refrigerators or porcelain or opal lined refrigerators would not do it if they were experts unless they wanted to be extravagant. I have in my experimenting room a sample of every known refrigerator. Practical tests don't demonstrate that porcelain refrigerators or porcelain or opal lined refrigerators are any better ice or provision keepers or any more sanitary than a first class wood refrigerator. Many manufacturers and dealers take advantage of misleading ideas on refrigerators by the people. If I should be governed by theories in making refrigerators, as many people are in buying them, my Cold Storage would not have been awarded first prize at the St. Louis Exposition. I am governed by what my Cold Storage will do for the people. I have made it a point to ascertain what class of people buy the Cold Storage, and I find it is a class that furnish their homes with the best without being extravagant.

We sell the Cold Storage Refrigerator on small monthly payments or a cut price for cash. The class of people who buy of us on the payment plan are the same class who buy the most prominent stoves for cash. We appreciate their patronage just as much and solicit their trade just as much as we do people who buy of us for cash.
