Must Pay His Wife—Elva R. Tingley, charged in county court with wife and child abandonment, was ben ordered to make a settlement of $200 upon the plaintiff, Emma Tingley. It is payable at the rate of $5 a month.

Fresh Air Camp—H. H. Parrish, contractor, has been awarded a contract to build a fresh air camp for the Visiting Nurse association in the north end of Riverview park. The building, which will be partly of canvas, will cost $1,000.

Hardware Men to Denver—The Union Pacific is planning on handling 200 retail hardware dealers by a special train from Omaha to Denver on July 8. The merchants are bound for the national convention and will stop off in Omaha for three hours before going farther west.

To Get Returns—Returns of the Jeffries-Johnson fight at Reno will be announced at the Vinton street ball park on the afternoon of the 25th when Lincoln and Omaha play. Direct connection with the scene of the battle will be made with the ball grounds and the results will be announced between the innings.

E. S. Students Entertain Masons—Tonight the Bellevue chapter of the Royal Arch Masons held an entertainment for the members and their friends. The Omaha High school Glee club will give a concert as a part of the show and the senior play which was produced at the Creighton auditorium will make up the remainder of the program.

To Consider Curbing—A special meeting of the North Central Improvement club will be held tonight at the corner of 15th, Twentieth and Lake streets, to consider the proposed curbing of Florence boulevard. A feeling of resentment exists among the property owners along the boulevard over the curbing situation. A member stated that it was the intention of the property owners interested, if the boulevard were not turned over to them for curbing, to get out a petition for paving, even though the boulevard suffered.

Big Travel for the Fourth—Railroads having lines in Nebraska anticipate very heavy business this Fourth of July. The Burlington will run a number of special trains, but passenger officials say that the Burlington will be short over 200 cars for the holiday. The Union Pacific and Northwestern will not run any special trains, but will use all extra coaches on the regular trains.

Fight Interest Wanes—Union Pacific officials announce that present conditions indicate that there will be a very small crowd of eastern people at the coming prize fight. The east and middle west seems to have lost all interest in the event and are not making plans for trains, as is usually the case when a big prize fight is announced. Since the change of location from California, reservations have been cancelled and new ones have not been made.

Charge is Removed—Clarence Givens was freed from the charge of robbing William Ravens, 213 North Twelfth street of $500 on June 14, when the plaintiff stated in police court Friday morning, that the prisoner held was not guilty. Ravens states that he drew $500 from the Merchants National bank, June 14, put the money in his vest and hung the vest on the wall while he went to sleep. When he awoke he found that the early bird had entered through the window, and relieved him of his burdensome riches.

In the Divorce Case—Jacob Small, a police officer of South Omaha, is the defendant in a suit for divorce brought by his wife, Harriet. She claims he caused her to be confined in the South Omaha jail without cause. The divorce suit of Charles C. Paxton against Verne E. Paxton, started in 1903, has been reopened. Eveline Nightingale has started suit for a divorce from Robert Nightingale on the grounds of cruelty. Jennie Katherine Stone has been given a decree from Squire Edward Stone. Martha E. Tullis has been divorced from Charles Tullis.

Laborer Loses and Finds Money

Negro Returns Purse with $400 in Money Orders and Gets $5 Reward.

The quietude of Postmaster Thomas' office was disturbed Thursday afternoon when Tony Scingarino, an Italian laborer, rushed in and proclaimed in broken English that he had been robbed of $400 in United States money orders. He explained that he had four orders for $100 each and that they had been carried in a pocketbook. Shortly after the arrival of Scingarino, while he was bewailing his loss, a colored man, James M. Dodson, stroled into the office and told Postmaster Thomas that he had found a pocket book with $400 worth of money orders. At sight of the missing property, the Italian, figuratively fell on the negro's neck and made a grab for the pocketbook. James retained possession and claimed that he was entitled to a reward. Mr. Thomas agreed with Dodson that a reward was due him and suggested that $5 would be about right. Scingarino offered $1, then $2 and finally acceded to the demand of the negro and slipped him a five.

Scingarino was working in an excavation at the Sherman & McConnell store on Sixteenth and Dodge streets and his pocketbook fell from his clothes. Dodson found the purse and took it to the postoffice. Tony had $100 in cash in another pocketbook, which he immediately converted into a postal order after he had received his valuable papers.

COYS HAND IN BEER FIGHT

Jim Engel Suffers Injury in Brawl at Courtland Beach Thursday Night.

During a fight for a title of beer, which occurred at Courtland Beach Thursday, Jim Engel, 203 Sherman avenue, showed his hand through a window of the pavilion and was so badly hurt that he had to be taken to the surgery of Dr. Morrison, Sixteenth and Locust streets, for treatment. He severed several of the principal arteries between the wrist and the thumb, and lost nearly a quart of blood before he was brought to the surgery. He was taken home after his wounds had been dressed.

CAFES BAR SHIRT WAISTS

Men Must Keep On Their Coats if They Would Eat.

Y. M. C. A. FOLLOWS SUIT

Man Must Sweater in a Coat if He Eats His Meals in Down Town Cafes—Guests Balk at the Rule.

"Pardon me, sir. You mustn't remove your coat; it's against the rules." It was the manager of a cafe in a very select hotel talking.

"Huh," said the patron. "Well, hang one of those fans over me and bring on a load of ice. Thought you people had cold air waves here."

"I'm sorry, sir, but will you kindly leave the place," the manager responded firmly. "Oh, all right, I'll keep on my coat, if you're as jealous as that," consented the patron. "Send me an order of lamb chops and some salad, and the implements for a high ball and a wedge of pie."

In the next minute a waiter was scurrying away to fill the order, and the patron was gazing meditatively about him.

"Say, friend," he remarked, sotto voce, to a patron sitting at the next table. "If you want to see a scrap and a half, keep your eyes on me. I'm going to start something here."

"I wouldn't do anything rash," remarked the other. "But I don't blame you for getting sore."

"I should say not. They ain't got any right making a chap perspire in their old joint, have they? I'm going to wait till this garcon brings in the chops, then watch me, I'm going to peel 'em off the coat, and if George looks cross-eyed, off comes the collar."

"Say, you're a sport; I'm with you," burst out the second patron. "I'll take off my coat, too. They lose the feast if they fooler."

By that time the other gentlemen were taking in the situation with great amusement. Several harked remarks showing marked prejudice against the management. In a moment themselves of coats, they agreed to divest themselves of coats.

"That's the system," announced the original insurgent. When George brings in the feed, off comes the coats, eh? Watch me and then follow up."

Insurgents Are Active.

There was a hopeless scene in the swell restaurant five minutes later. The manager was leaning his hair and raving. He couldn't rid the cafe of all its occupants and words were inadequate to express his utter disgust. "Hurry up and get through, will you gentlemen?" he asked plaintively. The shirt-sleeved insurgents, about a dozen in number, continued peacefully to devour the luncheon, and in the end passed peacefully out, with widespread looks of satisfaction on their faces.

An insurrection is on among patrons of the Young Men's Christian Association restaurant and several other select eating places of the city over the order prohibiting male patrons from removing their coats. The result of the order, according to reports from many directions, is that the restaurants which look generously and with favor upon the shirt-sleeved man, are on the boom.

that eat down-town, have been nursing up aggravation against the embargo on the wearing of coats. The crowds of the streets, even, have become well interspersed with men passing comfortably on their way without their coats.

In the Young Men's Christian association and the several other restaurants where the order for strict decorum in dress has gone into effect, several incidents have transpired. Patrons who hesitated to carry out the order have been seen to walk precipitately from the place and to report their chagrin.

Steals Clothing From Benefactor

Andrew Sculley Confesses Thefts and is Sent Up for Thirty Days.

After confessing that he had robbed the friend who had supported him in adversity and bought clothing for him, Andrew Sculley was given thirty days by Judge Crawford Friday.

Sculley was arrested Friday morning on the complaint of Edward Gavitt of 3002 Davenport street, who reported that his other had broken into his room by prying open a door and had stolen a suitcase containing a suit of clothes and a supply of haberdashery.

The suitcase was found at the checkstand of a local hotel, where it had been left and the duplicate deposit check was in the possession of Sculley when he was arrested. The prisoner admitted his guilt and after a long sweating finally acknowledged that he had stolen a check for $4 together with 50 cents in silver from I. M. Roman, a greenhouse man, and that he had destroyed the check. A watch which had been stolen from Gavitt a few days ago was also returned by the thief.

Sculley and Gavitt are chauffeurs and, according to Gavitt, he had on many occasions befriended Sculley, giving him money and help when he was out of work.

Miller Optimistic Over State Crops

Northwestern Official Says that the Dry Weather Will Make Cattle Move Early.

S. F. Miller, general freight and passenger agent for the Northwestern road, says that he has no fears for the crops of Nebraska this year, but he is of the opinion that the dryness of the last few weeks will tend to bring about an earlier movement of cattle than usual.

"Crops ought to be good," said Mr. Miller, "and from what I can learn Nebraska will not be behind this year on the fruits of the soil. Many people are pessimistic, but I look for good crops. The dryness of the past few weeks, however, has made the pastures so barren that the cattle can not get nourishing food and it looks as though there will be an earlier shipment of cattle this year than ordinarily. The stockmen cannot afford to let their cattle get this in the pastures, and they will be shipped to market sooner than usual."

Houghton Files For Nomination to Legislature

Building Contractor Says He's No Insurgent—Blank on Commissioners' Ticket.

Robert Houghton, the building contractor, has filed for the republican nomination as representative in the legislature. "And I did not sign statement No. 1, and will not vote for a democrat for senator," says Mr. Houghton. "You can say further that I am not seeking votes as an insurgent, but as a straight republican."

Frank O. Johnson of South Omaha has filed for the long term as county commissioner from that district on the republican ticket. The present holder of the position,

John Trouton, had already filed for the long term, which leaves a blank on the ticket, up to date, for the two months, November and December, next. Trouton was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of P. J. Trainor, and this election only holds until the votes are cast in November. It is not thought the vacancy will be overlooked very long. By filing for short term some ambitious citizen can draw two months' salary and then become an ex-commissioner.

MAIL CARS READY TO START

Trial Trip is Made Friday and All Will Be Ready for Work First of July.

One of the new United States mail cars which will be used for city delivery on the street car lines was tried on the new switch at the postoffice Thursday and it was found that a greater portion of the remaining wall at the turn into the postoffice premises would have to be moved before the cars could make the curve. When this is completed the cars will be ready to start carrying city mail, July 1.

Loses Purse in Jam at Beach

Edward Finan is Robbed of $240 While Buying Ticket at Courtland Beach.

While waiting to purchase a ticket at the entrance window of Courtland beach Edward Finan, 2421 South Twenty-first street, was robbed of a leather purse containing $240 and a diamond ring, Thursday night. In reporting the matter to the police, Mr. Finan explained he was caught in a jam at the window and his pockets were picked.
