

GRAIN AND PRODUCE MARKET

Wheat Traders Are Bearish, Owing to Recent Advances.

GOOD WEATHER IN CORN BELT

Commodities Practically the Same, but Wheat is Easing off Slightly—Northwest Markets Show Weakness.

OMAHA, JUNE 29, 1910.
The growing weather continues in the corn belt, and wheat prices are rapid growth. There was no particular pressure on the market and values are holding about steady.

Wheat opened off steadily from the opening on realizing gains, while longs held out later on reports of advances and new sales. In the northwest, Northwest markets show the greatest weakness of the month perfect corn growing weather in the corn belt, the market has been quiet, and some firms held steady in most cities. Prices held steady in most cities, except where receipts were 22,000 bushels.

Wheat receipts last year of 12,000 bushels and shipments of 10,000 bushels. Firmly held, receipts were 20,000 bushels, against receipts last year of 22,000 bushels and shipments of 18,000 bushels.

Wheat futures were 22,000 bushels, and wheat and wheat futures were 22,000 bushels, and wheat futures were 22,000 bushels.
