DR. BROWN ON SCHOOL WORK
Commissioner Outlines Plans of U. S. Bureau of Education.

WILL GATHER INFORMATION
Data as to Construction of Buildings, Attendance, Trade Schools, Health of Pupils Will Be Collected and Compiled.

BOSTON, Mass., July 5.—A brief outline of the course that will be pursued by the United States bureau of education in its efforts to promote education during the coming year, and a tribute to the achievements of the late Dr. William Torrey Harris, formerly in charge of that work, were the principal features of an address by Dr. Elmer E. Brown, the present commissioner of education, before the National Education association in this city today.

It was an extraordinary legacy that was left to the bureau of education by Commissioner William Torrey Harris, declared Dr. Brown. "The present administration of that office has no finer nor higher responsibility than that of maintaining at its best the spirit and that tradition which constitute that legacy."

Dr. Brown referred to the institution of a new division for the promotion of methods of school administration and also of the use of specialists for improving the work of the land-grant colleges as additions that had been made to the activities of the service under him. He pictured the educational work being carried on in Alaska as the most extensive experiment of that kind in the world.

School Problems in Alaska. "Such a practice school presents the white man's burden in its most concrete form, with all of the difficulties and all of the inspiring opportunities presented by this world education movement of our time," he added.

At the Clubs
At the Country Club. The Durbar at the Country club Monday afternoon made the club a popular rendezvous and following the races and stunts many dinner parties were given.

Improvement of Attendance. Speaking of the functions of his bureau, Dr. Brown continued: "The improvement of school attendance must go hand in hand with the abatement of child labor and numerous other undertakings for the general welfare of childhood. It is the business of a central office to call repeated attention to these relationships and to help those who are at work in neighboring fields to work together for their common ends."

would lead to the saving of only 1 per cent on this expenditure would cause an aggregate annual saving of $700,000 and the saving of the health of pupils which can be accomplished through more hygienic construction is an incomparably greater concern.

The supervision of rural schools, improvements in the training of teachers, the relations of the secondary schools to colleges and universities were referred to by Dr. Brown, who declared that there was never a time when a mediating agency was more needed in this field.

In connection with these needs he said the near future would bring up questions relating to the reorganization of the whole educational activity of the federal government.
