HIS SEARCH BEARS FRUIT

Ad Club Asks Merchants of Omaha to Decorate in Honor of the Visitors Who Will Be Here Next Week.

Curtis L. Mosher, advance guard of the Minnesota advertising convention, delegates, arrived in Omaha Saturday morning and promptly set about hunting for two beautiful young women who are to preside at the exhibit of Minnesota ads and Minnesota products at the Home during the convention. Although of critical and fastidious taste Mr. Mosher quickly found two girls of desired pathos and these were engaged.

Mr. Mosher is the director of the publicity bureau of the Gopher capital. Besides Governor A. O. Eberhart the Minnesota delegation will include D. M. Neel, president of the Minnesota Federation of Commercial Clubs; R. W. Whislock, who is the governor's private secretary, and Samuel G. Iversen, the auditor of state. Omaha will entertain during the several days of the convention at least 500 men. Tuesday will be the biggest day of all. Lincoln is coming 300 strong and St. Joseph will pull in by another special train the same day. The special from Chicago, which will bring a number of easterners Monday afternoon, will have at least 100 aboard.

Call for Decorations.

The Omaha Ad club is asking all Omaha business houses to decorate their store fronts early Monday morning in honor of the ad men.

President Underland has written the following letter: To the Merchants of Omaha: During next week Omaha will act as host for two exceedingly important organizations, the Associated Ad Clubs of America, assembled national convention, and the Saengerfest. Decorations will be profuse and Omaha will present to her visitors a decidedly gay appearance.

Inasmuch as the ad men's convention begins Monday morning, this club makes urgent request that all decorations be placed as early as possible Monday morning, especially along the line of march and throughout the retail section of the city. Many of the big stores on which the writer called previously have agreed to do this, and we feel confident that our request will meet with hearty compliance.

Child Struck By Car is Unhurt

Three-Year-Old Tot Stands in Track and Motor Man Jams On Brakes.

The year-and-a-half-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam George of 1307 South Thirtieth street escaped death Saturday morning only by the quick actions of Motor Man W. C. Blake, who was operating a northbound Benson car when the youngster toddled onto the track directly in front of the car. It was impossible to bring the car to a stop, but its speed was so quickly brought down that as the fender struck the child it was tossed out of the way of the wheels and was not injured past breaking the skin on his ear.

SENDS OUT WEED NOTICES

Road Overseer Avery Mails Out Order to Property Owners to Cut Weeds on Roads.

Henry Avery, the new road overseer for Douglas county, has declared war on weeds. Douglas county land owners must remove weeds on their roads or pay for their removal. Mr. Avery is sending out copies of the following notification: "You are hereby notified that unless you mow or otherwise destroy all weeds to the middle of the public road running along your land, on or before the 15th day of August, 1910, I will as overseer of roads, cause said weeds to be mowed or destroyed, and cause the expense thereof to be assessed against your land and collected as other taxes, as provided by law."

Russian Boy to Learn English in Two Months

With only enough knowledge of the English language to count up to fifty, a 16-year-old Russian boy arrived in Omaha last week and applied for admission to the high school. His name, when he learns to speak well enough to have an American name, will be Isaac Silverman. He has no parents in this country, and found his way unaided to the home of an uncle, who is a peddler.

ISAAC SILVERMAN.

Anywhere in Europe the boy could make travel easily, for he is a master of French and German, besides his native Russian. These other languages he reads easily and speaks accurately, which shows his natural aptitude for language study, and indicates that he will not have such a hard time as might be imagined in his self-set task of learning English in two months. By going to the special classes in English conducted by Miss Tilton at Cornwell school, and by talking English to everybody as soon as he gets a start, he expects to learn enough to make himself understood in classes, and he expects to enter the high school as a junior.

In consulting with the superintendent of instruction through an interpreter, the boy was told that he could take work in German, Latin, mathematics and English. The German and Latin and mathematics were already familiar studies to him in his work in the Russian "gymnasium," and the English was to be his principal task. Four studies were not enough, he thought, but was forced to content himself with them until he can prove his capacity for more. The boy was born at Odessa, January 24, 1894, of Jewish parents. His brilliancy in study was demonstrated when his parents gave him a chance to take a four-year course in a private gymnasium, or secondary school. In two years' time he had finished this work and received a diploma which would have entitled him to enter the fifth year of the government six-year school.

near the end as they began to get more difficult. At one problem in factoring he stopped altogether and without making any effort to work it out remarked to his uncle that his training had not included that sort of problem, and he probably could not do it very well. He knew as soon as he saw it that it was more advanced work than he was prepared for, although it was only a little different from the others. The boy has a gracefully serious appearance, is polite and easy in his bearing and is evidently possessed of both the brains and the confidence necessary to carry through his plan of stepping immediately into his place in American schools.

NEWARK'S TRAGEDY OF ERRORS

Long String of Mistakes is to Blame for the Recent Lynching in Ohio Town.

NEWARK, O., July 16.—(Special Correspondent to St. Joseph News-Press.)—The Newark lynching was a tragedy of errors.

This seems to be the consensus of unbiased opinion. First, it seems, the people of Ohio erred in making a county option law the topknot home rule away from certain cities, among them Newark. This was the fundamental error. It's an error that might be made in any state; it raises the question of whether town option is not better than county option.

Then there were a number of incidental errors. People here identified with neither faction involved in the wet and dry feud, and who can weigh the facts soberly, agree: That the wets have erred in flagrant violation of the law. That the dries have erred in blundering and unskillful efforts to enforce the law. That the deputy mayor of Newark has erred in falling strictly to enforce the law. That the police erred in failing to make any deterring effort to protect the threatened man.

That the resigned sheriff erred in misjudging the temper of the mob and in failing to call for troops or to make a real defense of the jail when the attack came. That the Anti-Saloon league erred in hiring mercenaries of a low type to do its spying. That the dry detectives erred in displaying slyly bravado in making their raids. All these incidental blunders, however, hark back to and have their basis on the big blunder that deprived Newark of home rule, that made the town subject to a so-called "local" option law through the votes of people who do not live in Newark.

County Option Law Blamed. The county option law deprives the wet element of real local option on the liquor question. When a county goes dry, that settles the matter till another election can be held. The wet element has no recourse. But if a county goes wet, the dries can still invoke the old local option law and vote the county dry by piecemeal, township by township and district by district in cities.

The anti-saloon people argue that the liquor traffic is wrong, and that the end justifies the means they use in fighting it. The wets, feeling that injustice is worked by the fact that the dries can drive the local option law tandem while they themselves cannot, act naturally indignant. The injustice seems to them to afford good ground for flagrant violation of the law. Thus they lose such respect as they may have for the laws of the state.

Braving for Two Years. The trouble in Newark has been brewing for nearly two years. The county option law has engendered a bitter feud between Licking county and its county seat. The city voted wet by a majority of 1,500. The dry vote of the county, outside the corporation of Newark, was strong enough to wipe out Newark's wet majority and carry the county by a majority of 745.

Thus the city of Newark went dry, nominally, a year ago last January. Home rule had been taken away; the city was made subject to a law that a majority of its citizens didn't endorse. Result: Anarchy. Newark was "wetter" than ever before.

The wet element, urging that it is rankly unjust in the nature of things, for one community to impose its will upon another in a matter of personal liberty, refused to obey the mandate of the rural districts. The city administration, being frankly wet in sympathy, made only perfunctory efforts to enforce the law.

Open Tension for Year and Half. Open tension for a year and half Newark has been in a town, twenty-four hours in the day, seven days in the week. The dry element, arguing that the people of a county have an equal right with the people of the county seat in determining how their county seat shall be run, have made various efforts to enforce the law over the head of former Mayor Atherton.

These efforts have been ineffectual. They have served only to engender greater bitterness between the two factions. The last of these efforts, to date, resulted in the shooting of William Howard "Saw-Box" Ashbourne, former captain of Newark police, and the hanging of his slayer on the public square within a stone's throw of the Licking county court house.

So much for county local option that isn't local option. If Newark had some rule there would have been no lynching. For then there would have been

RESTORING MEN TO GOOD CITIZENSHIP

Transforming Besotted Drunkards Into Sober Men, Making Good Husbands and Fathers

THE WORK OF JUST THREE DAYS

A Remarkable Treatment Taken Internally That Effects a Perfect Cure of the Pernicious Drink Habit.

THE GROWING WONDER OF THIS AGE

ANY TREATMENT that can take a besotted drunkard, a worthless bum, and make a good citizen out of him, make him a good husband, make him a good father, deserves the unqualified and unreserved support of all physicians, all clergymen, all lawyers, all business men, all bankers, and all good people who are interested in good government.

ANY TREATMENT that can take the semblance of a man, with all manhood gone, all self-respect gone, all shame gone, all decency gone, and be lower than a brute, and restore his manhood, restore his self-respect, send the tinge of shame to his cheeks as he thinks of other days, restore his decency, and make a man of him once again, such a treatment is a greater boon to humanity than a panacea that lengthens out or even saves life.

ANY TREATMENT that can take a shattered nervous system and rebuild it, take a human brain that is tottering on the verge of insanity and restore it to its normal condition, that will quench the everlasting fire in the stomach that is burning to a white heat, that will cleanse and purify the humorous blood of the entire system, that will clear up the skin and restore the complexion, that will rekindle the light of intelligence in the eyes, that will take away all inclination to drink, all desire, craving and appetite for drink, and make the drunkard a permanently sober man, is certainly a transforming treatment such as the world never knew before.
