same being in honor of some distinguished citizen of St. Joseph. There is one especially well groomed male of senatorial bearing. He led the way and by certain utterances, which are perfectly well known, but impossible to describe, for the very good reason that type can't make the sound, he acted as drum major on the way up Farnam street. The names of the males are Chris L. Hut, Frank Freytag, John Albus, Frank Yenawine, H. A. Sprague and A. W. Brewster. These names, you understand, are simply borrowed for this occasion--that is, the males have been named for this occasion in honor of St. Joseph men who do things; St. Joseph men who have helped to bring that city up to a rank about the first-class towns of the west.

AMERICAN SPIRIT SPREADS

Some of those people who write sentences in English that might well serve as copies for writing anywhere.

"In Japan and Korea we could find American spirit permeating the life of the people, slowly to be sure, but unmistakably. We met graduates of American universities who proudly named their alma maters and made us feel quite at home and among friends. In both countries they are going forward along lines closely approximating our own lines of development. In Korea American mining engineers are developing the wealth of the earth, while in Japan and China very many of the foremost men are inspired by American ideals.

"The American spirit of better living, if not extravagance, is found abroad on the foreign nations. They are demanding improved conditions, higher standards, and the effort is bound to be good. Of course, in that direction this nation caps the sheet, but wherever the desire and the drift is upward.

"The world of the American missionaries is having a wonderful effect, considering relatively the tools they have to work with, and to observe traveler from this country can't fail to note that fact with pride and pleasure.

"Pleading the absence from the country on a world tour, with little or no opportunity to acquaint himself with political developments, the Indiana statesman begged to be excused from talking politics at all. No suit of maneuvering or questioning would suffice to draw him out on that line.

"The former vice-president said he had put himself out to some extent to come to the ad men's convention, simply because he feels it one of the agencies for better things in this country. 'I have always felt,' he said, 'that wherever I could aid in that line I should do so, as every public man should, because these improving, forward movements should be encouraged to the fullest extent.'

"No sooner had his arrival become known than Mr. Fairbanks was overwhelmed with invitations to take luncheons and automobile rides. He could not accept, he said, because he was in the hands of the ad club committee, and was also under the necessity of having for home shortly after 4 o'clock.

"Before going to the Boyd opera house to make his address he and Colonel Leok, who entered an automobile with C. C. Rosewater for a brief run about the city.

"GREAT OYSTER FOR FAIRBANKS
Former Vice President's Speech at Boyd is Widely Applauded.
No visiting potentate could have received a more resounding ovation than did former Vice President Fairbanks in the morning session of the ad men's convention at the Boyd theater. Three bands secured the vast assemblage into the meeting place and the surging throngs of visitors from all over the country with an enormous representation of local men, packed the theater.

high, should be immune from just criticism, but they should not be subjected to much of the abuse heaped upon them by the muck-rakers and sensationalists, who are actuated only by sordid, mercenary motives, or by some other equally ungenerous purpose far short of the public interest. There is perhaps, nothing more reprehensible than the loose impeachment of the motives of the chief executive, the downright misrepresentation of his acts, distortion of his record by suppression of the truth or by pure falsehood. No possible good can result therefrom; on the contrary, in the end confidence in the government is undermined.

"In the case of the chief executive, upon congress were likewise denounced. Upon the sale alone, unfounded utterance, respecting the integrity and patriotism of those who frame and administer the people's laws, begot distrust, want of confidence and doubt as to the beneficence of the government itself. It is impossible to discredit the motives and the servants of the state who are worthy without impairing the state itself. Men who will wantonly and maliciously assail our public servants--no matter what their political faith may be, and who are faithful to public duty--are traitors to the state, no matter how lofty their hypocritical professions may seem to sound."

Mr. Fairbanks brought a laugh when he said: "I am a great believer in such associations and meetings. When your generous invitation came, I was delighted to accept, but upon further reflection I thought it better to decline, as I had something to do with American politics might not be entirely out of place amidst a great body of advertisers like this. Men in American political life either advertise or get advertised sooner or later."

"Advertising has been developed until it has become one of the most prominent features of our everyday life. In fact, it has become a science. The American Association of Advertising Clubs, into which it is put so much of energy and the 'get-up-and-get-there' spirit, is evidence of the fact that there will not be any retreat or diminution in the development of the publicity side of American business. The best advertiser and the best merchant are synonymous, and the poorest advertiser is usually the one who finds himself in a state of bankruptcy."

"After pointing out some of the benefits of advertising to foreign markets, Mr. Fairbanks said: 'We are far behind some of our competitors in the matter of publicity where we seek the world's markets. The increasing capacity of our manufacturers emphasizes the necessity of turning our attention more and more systematically and intelligently to foreign markets. Much of the effort to advertise our goods not only in Asia, but in European countries, among people who do not speak our language, yields results which are scarcely worth the mention. There is a failure to appreciate local conditions and the tastes and prejudices of people whose patronage is sought.'

"The speaker then pointed out that American exporters do not take pains to render their foreign advertising into the language of the people whose trade they seek; do not reckon money in their terms instead of ours and treat weights and measures the same way. He gave details of several instances that have come under his own notice and said American merchants also hurt and impede our export trade by carelessness in boxing their goods for shipment.

"We are not only advertising our goods abroad, but we are advertising our political institutions, which are being studied more, perhaps, than at any time in our history. Rulers and cabinets and publicists are making themselves familiar with our government, and it is not difficult to discover the gradual incorporation of many of the principles and features of our own more and more into theirs.

"The American spirit is abroad; there is no suggestion of the intrusion of the bully about it. Our diplomacy is founded upon principles of justice and fair play, and we make our performance square with our professions. We have stood for justice among the powers, both great and small, so that no one has any lurking suspicion of our exalted purpose. While trade is not controlled by mere sentiment, nevertheless universal respect and admiration for our country will not fail to have a potential influence in enlarging the opportunity of American trade in foreign lands."

"Turning to another aspect of American conduct abroad, Mr. Fairbanks said: 'We have some travelers abroad who are doing much to advertise us in an unenviable way. There is a certain class seen to a vulgar display of their wealth, which is fast making it costly and uncomfortable for people of limited means to travel in their wake.'

RAILROAD WRECK IN IRELAND
Hundreds Injured in Accident on the Great Southern at Keshmarr.
None Killed.
DUBLIN, July 19--Several cars of an excursion train on the Great Southern railway broke away from the locomotive today and running down an incline, crashed into a passenger train. May persons jumped from the runaway cars and tumbled down the embankment. About one hundred persons were injured, most of them slightly.

CRY DOBBS FOR PRESIDENT

Friends of Atlanta Man Declare He Will Be Re-Elected.

MANY TOWNS WANT HONORS
Contest is Warm as to Where the Next National Convention Will Be Held--Hard Pulling is Being Done.

Samuel C. Dobbs of Atlanta will probably be re-elected president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America. The name of I. H. Sawyer of St. Louis may be presented the convention, but the Dobbs men have so many votes lined up that the Missourian may withdraw from the race.

St. Louis men professed Tuesday to be confident that the outcome will be their way, but many other delegations were fairly unanimous in desiring that Dobbs be "it." One thing is certain, the popularity of the present president has increased considerably since the convention began and he was greatly admired before the session started.

Milwaukee's chances for the next convention are not burning so brightly as on Monday because of the rapid strides made by the candidacy of Boston. Little was talked of the Denver and Milwaukee men did not even know that the Back Bay city was to enter.

Boston now stands a good show because of conditions connected with the future of the association now holding its convention. The Associated Advertising Clubs of America have never been strong in the east and the big Sphinx club of Philadelphia, the Quon club of New York, the Pilgrims and the others have not affiliated with this organization. Meanwhile Buffalo, Detroit and Cleveland have a little association of their own and are angling for the eastern clubs named. If a union could be effected, the result would kill itself a national association.

Now the Associated Ad clubs have had six annual conventions, have been west and south and in the Mississippi Valley and have never gone east. For the sake of turn about and that the Atlantic coast club may be tempted in, this coming convention may, many delegates, ought to go to Boston.

Boston Shows Strength.
Considerable voting strength had already been secured for Boston. The southeastern men favor it as a matter of their own convenience. The Georgians could go by boat from Savannah. Such easterners as are in the association now may be depended upon to plump for Boston and a number of Des Moines men have been won over.

The attitude of the Chicago delegation is enigmatic. "Can't get a word out of them," said missionaries returning from the Chicago headquarters. A good many think that Chicago is pretty well hooked up with Milwaukee.

Denver has made some progress among the southwestern section including the Texas men, and Kansas city delegates have privately spoken in behalf of Denver, although the delegation as a whole is not yet pledged. Oklahoma City does not appear to be in the running.

The convention will probably see a lively fight on the floor over the question, because no city may go in with a majority at the start, although Boston, as said, is coming fast. Caucuses are now the order of the day and a good deal of trading is going on. Various delegations have candidates for minor offices, memberships on the executive committee and so forth, and these are trying to utilize their votes on the convention site to advance the interest of their men. LeQuatte of Des Moines, seems to have a good chance to land the vice presidency.

WOMEN LISTEN TO FAIRBANKS
Show No Partiality in Decorations, but Wear Colors from All Cities.

The hero of the second day of the Ad Men's convention was, so far as the women were concerned, ex-Vice President Fairbanks. Instead of watching about Omaha in the morning, as was originally planned, these ex-official delegates marched to the Boyd theater to listen to his address. And before taking the march they walked in the courtyard at the Boyd hotel in order to meet and greet the returned voyager. The ex-vice president seemed to appreciate thoroughly the fair advertising of their home city and though already late for the speech-making stopped to chat a bit.

With splendid impartiality the women wore Des Moines carnations, Sioux City badges, St. Joseph streamers, boosted for Denver, Milwaukee, Oklahoma City or Boston as offered boasting symbols.

CRIPPEN CLUES WORKED OUT

London Police Deny Reported Capture of American Doctor.

BODY IS STILL UNIDENTIFIED
Canal Will Be Dragged in Hope of Finding Bones Which Were Removed from Flesh.

LONDON, July 19--The rumor circulated in the United States that Dr. Hawley H. Crippen had been captured at Canterbury, England, is groundless.

Scotland Yard found today what is believed to be a clue to the disposition of the bones, which with the flesh unearthed in the cellar in Hilltop Crescent, once formed the body of Belle Elmore, the American actress, wife of Dr. Crippen.

As a result of a tireless search among the friends and known acquaintances of Ethel Clara Leneve, the typist who disappeared recently with Dr. Crippen, the detective found a woman who said that Miss Leneve had been her friend and had talked to her in confidence. The typist, the woman said, had spoken to her of mysterious visits paid by Dr. Crippen to the neighborhood of Regents Park.

The theory woven from these circumstances by the police is that the disjunct bones of the murdered woman may have been carried in small parcels to Regents Park and deposited in the Regents canal. The authorities ordered that the canal be dragged.

Woman Probably Innocent.
This development has strengthened the belief of Miss Leneve's friends that if Mrs. Crippen was murdered the woman who is said to have won her husband's affections was innocent of any knowledge of the crime.

At the inquest yesterday the physicians who examined the dismembered body testified that none of the bones had been found and that their analysis indicated that the flesh had been skillfully carved from the skeleton.

It has been deemed of great importance to discover the missing members, including the head, hands and feet, in order to complete the body and thus establish legally the case of murder. With the evidence at hand the experts have not as yet been able to determine so much as the sex of the victim.

Today the authorities offered a reward of $125 for information leading to the arrest of Dr. Crippen.

No Important Clues.
Reports of Crippen and his woman companion having been seen in different parts of the country are frequently received by the police and there are occasional rumors that the two had been arrested. Thus far Superintendent Frost of Scotland Yard, who is directing the search, does not admit that any important discovery has been made.

There is still hope that the fugitive pair may be found aboard the Red Star liner Kroonland, which sailed from Dover on the night following the disappearance of the doctor and which is due at New York tonight.

The ports of France are picketed with detectives and so closely have the lines been drawn that the British officials believe it will be impossible for Dr. Crippen to flee this country without detection.

The impression is strong in police circles that the doctor will not hazard recognition on a long trip, and his apprehension at some point in England or within this city at any moment would not cause great surprise.
