Hints About Jelly.

Unlike many of the fancied ways of "making the most of things" these suggestions of a housewife wise in the ways of jelly making will be found valuable in this season of high and scarce fruit.

"Many years ago," she writes, "I was making quince jelly, and having drained the quinces was about to throw out the contents of the jelly bag, when an old lady, who was visiting me, said: 'Oh, you shouldn't do that! Put it back into the kettle, stir water into it until it is like thin porridge, boil ten minutes and drain it again. It will make just as good jelly as the first lot.' I was rather incredulous, but followed directions, and sure enough, the jelly was just as good, clear and well flavored as the first lot, though there was a smaller quantity. Of course, after that I always got the full good of my quinces.

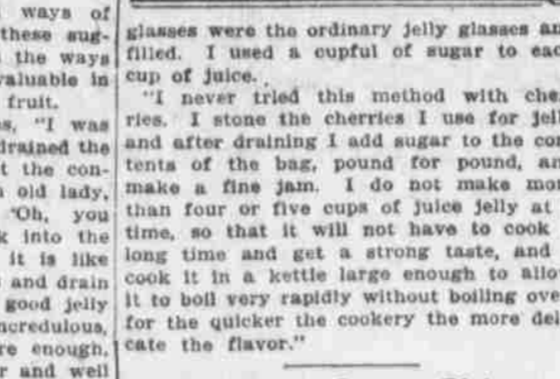

"Several years afterwards, when fruit was exceedingly scarce, and I was making jelly from a few quarts of currants I thought I would try the same plan with this sort of method. I had eight quarts of currants, seven pints of raspberries and one quart of gooseberries. I added water to come half way to the top of the currants, boiled them until soft, and turned them into the jelly bag to drain. I did just the same with the raspberries. From the juice I made twenty-two glasses of current jelly and nine of raspberry. I then put the contents of both bags into a kettle, adding water, stirring over the fire until I had a thin mush, boiled it a short time, drained it and made ten glasses of current and raspberry jelly. I boiled the gooseberries in about three pints of water, then added the contents of the jelly bag, stirred, cooked and drained, and made six glasses of tutti fruit jelly, a total of forty-seven glasses of stiff, fine flavored jelly, from just the same with the raspberries. The less than thirteen quarts of fruit. The

$2.45--yes--even $2.75 and $3.00 Shoes, at $1.95

A watchful WOMAN is a MASTER economist. WE are selling REAL $2.45 to $3 shoes at $1.95 NOW, and the watch ful Women KNOW it. Last Saturday we inaugurated a sale of ANY pair of low cut shoes in the "Basement" at $1.95, and the WATCHFUL women were all here. THEY'VE spread the truth and we've had a record breaking "CLEARANCE" all week as a result.

Now then, here's the story over again. ANY pair of "Basement" low cuts, even those marked $2.45, are NOW $1.95. And we are continually bringing DOWN from our UP stairs section, lots of shoes that HAVE been selling at $2.75 and $3. That's the TRUTH—now how does it appeal?

glasses were the ordinary jelly glasses and filled. I used a cupful of sugar to each cup of juice.

"I never tried this method with cherries. I stoned the cherries I use for jelly and after draining I add sugar to the contents of the bag, pound for pound, and make a fine jam. I do not make more than four or five cups of juice jelly at a time, so that it will not have to cook a long time and get a strong taste, and I cook it in a kettle large enough to allow it to boil very rapidly without boiling over, for the quicker the cookery the more delicate the flavor."

Soup as a Summer Diet.

After a woman has worked and worried over a hot fire preparing meals for her family she is on the verge of exhaustion; all the appetite and enjoyment of eating has been lost to her in the cooking. There are, however, many delightful ways of serving good, appetizing summer meals from the various kinds of prepared soups, avoiding the danger and discomfort of standing over a hot range.

Once a woman gets acquainted with the high excellence and almost unlimited uses of these soups she will never again bother with heavy cooked meals during hot weather. Wonderfully convenient for all occasions, the soups do away with the bother and heat of cooking. They make the whole housekeeping problem simpler and easier.

A Mexican Dish.

The Mexicans make a very savory dish by frying griddle cakes very thin, dipping each one in chili sauce, placing them in a hot dish, covering them with grated cheese and a few minced onions and garnishing with stoned olives.

Record Pear Shipment.

A record shipment of fruit was made recently in one day from Sacramento, Cal., to eastern markets. It was made up of 30,000 crates of Bartlett pears, which were loaded into seventy-five refrigerator cars, the total weight being 600 tons. The traffic exceeded a similar instance of a year ago by thirty cars. This far this season more than 2,500 tons of fruit have been shipped from the same point as against 1,745 tons last year.

NEW STYLES OF MERE MAN

Brown Study Ideals Pictured in the Day Dreams of College Girls.

He must have brown eyes and brown hair. His neckties should be brown, but lavender or turquoise blue is permitted. He must be at least six feet tall. He may prefered. He must have a sense of humor. He must have an income of at least $1,000 a year to start with and "prospects." He must be a perfect gentleman. Last and absolutely necessary—he must own an automobile.

If you do measure up to these plans and specifications you need not try to marry a Barnard college girl. The class of 1910 has decided. Speaking for the college girls of America, it has made up the all-husband team chosen from the suitors of the entire country.

This is the last word of female higher education in regard to man. Yet, upon analysis, there is observed a striking resemblance to the ideal of the frizzle-haired little fluff of girlhood who sits in the balcony front row at the matinee and worships the idol on the stage.

Higher education may have turned the feminine mind from Chaucer's Cicot. It may not confess Donald Brian. But there are evidences that it has not risen far above James K. Hackett, and on the heights still gaze upon the heroes of Charles Dana Gibson's pencil and Robert W. Chambers's pen.

Higher culture has lifted the mind of woman from tating and batter cokes to Browning and the encyclopedia. But it has not been able to wear her away from the bargain counter or take her eyes off the handsome man. She may admire intellectual force and honor moral courage, but she wants Prince Charming to come a-wooing—and to come in an automobile.

She may marry a humpshouldered professor who wins fame by his discovery in regard to the bill-bit of the Stegomyia Fasciata, or the corner grocer, who has red hair and a Dayton wagon, may lead her to the altar. But, deep down in her heart, she will always cherish the vision of the six-foot Greek god in the lavender tie.

Useful.

"May I escort you to the swimming party tomorrow, Miss Sittel?"

"Why, yes, I'd like to go, thank you, but mother will have to chaperone me."

"Do—do you think that's necessary?"

"Of course I do. I'm never afraid when mother's along. Mother knows just what to do for cramps, and she can swim like a champion duck!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
