Minister Held in Assault Case

Rev. F. M. Weeks is Set Upon by a Plasterer and Beaten and Then Arrested.

After being chased for some distance and then attacked and severely beaten about the face and eyes, Rev. F. M. Weeks, a Presbyterian minister, was assaulted Monday morning by Frank Lentzinger, a plasterer, who was working at the Lafayette flats at Eighteenth and Jackson, which are owned by Rev. Weeks. As the laborer for a moment stopped his fighting and then renewed his attack, Officer Ferris arrived on the scene and placed both men under arrest. They were taken to the station, a complaint filed against them for fighting and after a brief hearing before Judge Crawford, the case was continued until Tuesday morning, when witnesses will be produced.

up the plastering. The minister told the men that there was an additional place that needed attention on the second floor. The men, however, insinuated that they did not intend to look after it, as they had no orders to that effect from their contractor. Later, while Rev. Weeks was assisting one of his tenants in moving into the flats, Lentzinger came to him and wanted to be shown the place that needed attention. The minister stated to him, however, that he could not leave at that moment, but told him where the location of the place was. Following this the plasterer became enraged for some reason, and attacked the minister, who attempted to escape him by running. He was reached, however, and received a pounding at the hands of the plasterer, who succeeded in tearing his shirt from his back in the process. As the minister commenced to take the names of witnesses, the laborer is alleged to have said, "Well, if I am going to get pinched, I'll do a good job while I am at it," and with that renewed his assault.
