SHERMAN WANTS CONVERTS

Vice-President Would Not Read Any-one Out of Party—No Time for Quarrels.

GUTHRIE, Okl., Sept. 1.—"I am not here to read any republican out of the party. All are welcome and, like the minister of the gospel, I would turn sinners from their erring ways and take them back in the fold of true republicanism."

New Shawl Scarf

Many of the newest of these silk scarves are in Persian effect bordered with satin bands of some contrasting or harmonizing shade. Woman, be she athlete or suffragette, has never loved the art of looking so feminine and appealing when enveloped in the folds of one of these new shawl scarves.

Boss of the Establishment

The Red-Headed Seaside Siren, He Decides, is Something of a Bluff.

BY AMERE MAN.

"All men were created free and equal," observed the Boss of the Establishment, gravely. "At least the declaration of independence says so. But it doesn't say anything about women. The signers knew better. I guess they were mostly married men."

"The Fourth of July is over," the Boss' wife dryly reminded him. "When this sudden burst of patriotism?"

"I was thinking what a lot of undemocratic snobs you women are!" confessed the candid critic.

"Meaning that I don't intend to answer that Mrs. Brown's invitation?" replied the lady of unerring instinct. "Why should I? What do I know about person I met for two weeks at a summer resort? What right has she to ask me?"

"You might have given her your address or she couldn't have written you," the Boss retorted. "Why, the way you two chummed when we were at the seashore I thought you'd found the friend of a lifetime!"

"That's because men are so literal," his wife exclaimed. "How could I help giving my address when she asked for it?"

"Then after a pause the Boss' spouse condescended to explain. "You see, you know 'You see, my dear,'" she said, "you can know almost any kind of a person out of town, but when you're in New York you ought to be fairly certain that none of your friends is in the rogues' gallery. And really, I don't see why you're so terribly interested in this Mrs. Brown."

Items of Interest for the Women Folks

Many girls and young married women often are disappointed in the candid criticism passed by their male belongings about their clothes. "You never seem to please a man," said a girl one day. "Something always seems wrong about a gown in his eyes." Doubtless she had reason for her complaint in many ways, but the real secret of pleasing the average man is to avoid the usual extremes in dress—the outrageously flaring hats and the unworkable skirts, says the Montreal Star.

Women ought to have a set of rules about the personal note in their gowns. They should study the colors that become them, as it is from the whole that the result, pleasing or otherwise, is taken. Man's highest praise is usually, "She was awfully well turned out," which means that the object of their admiration has refrained from the ultra eccentricities of fashion and was smart from the top of her well coiffured head to her trim footgear, and also that her gloves were neat and stylish.

The little boleros and yoke pieces now worn so much may be fashioned from short remnants to be picked up just now at bargain prices, possibly from scraps left over from the summer sewing. These small accessories are a great aid to good effect and many a shabby waist will be made to blossom anew for a time at least by such an addition. For main-line waists they are a great convenience, and nearly all kinds of materials lend themselves well to developing into these little garments, such as lawn, velvet, silk, banding, braid, net, lace, linen and fine woolen goods.

A cute and practical little suit for a small boy is of tan linen. The bloomers are full and ample, and the blouse in Russian style is trimmed at the neck, which is cut away in Dutch round, with a self-shaped hand strapped with narrow lines of red linen. The hand drops down the left side in the form of a pointed tab and is decorated with a row of buttons covered with the red. A similar band finishes the short sleeves, and a loose belt to match defines the waist line. A row of four buttons is set on from the closing.

THE DAILY BUMBLE BEE

VOL. I OMAHA, SEPTEMBER 2, 1910. NO. 203.

YE EDITOR OF THE BUMBLE BEE

Attains His Life's Ambition

Has the Proud Privilege of Shaking the Hand that Wields the Big Stick and Chases the Undesirable Things to Their Lair.

He's here today. He'll be in Sioux Falls tomorrow. Such is life. Ever since Mr. Dooley called attention to the Hero of San Juan by reviewing his famous book, "Alone in Cuba," Ye Editor has longed to greet him.

Today will be marked as the greatest in all our lives. We have met him. The man who has hunted horse thieves in the brakes of the Little Missouri; who has chased graft through the purple of the New York police force; who charged up San Juan hill and chased the octopus across the United States filled his tongue hung out; who potted lions and hippos and rhinos and didkiks and gooses and fillitoo birds and the like under Africa's blazing sun; who scorned the tsetse fly (whatever that is) and the sleeping sickness, and who couldn't spell bookworm to save his life, shook hands with Ye Editor today.

So they all agreed to a recount. Then they got an injunction to hold up the recount. And finally— Well, the finally hasn't yet been reached, but the rule of the peepul is a wonderful thing.

Senator Sorenson. Ye Editor is authorized to announce that Senator Sorenson will not ask for a recount. He is not exactly satisfied with the result, but says he will accept it this time, but that next time these political pikers had better look out. He's nailed his colors to the mast, and is bound to stick for the big show.

Daily Health Hint

Inequality of the circulation of the blood in various parts of the body is the condition precedent to catarrh, and this may be brought about by wet feet, by a draught on a limited portion of the skin and by various other ways.

BUT FLAG THE GIRLS.

My friend, were I the ocean, bathing girls I'd adore; I'd wave my coaxing billows in beckoning for more. And I don't mind confiding, I would not hug the shore. —J. E. M.

PERSONAL

Norm Haggood was a miser on Tuesday. Norm is some guesser when it comes to politics. He's also an editor.

George Ade looked over the city Tuesday. George is a farmer from Indiana—at times.

Among other visitors noticed on our streets today is Giff Pinchot. Giff was in the government service a little time back.

Jimmie Garfield is spending a few hours in town today. Jim looks mighty good, considering.

Garrut Fort says he don't mind running a railroad, but it's considerable of a strain to have to look after a railroad and a lot of heavy-weight editors at the same time.

Governor Shallenberger is with us today; let us hope that he will come often enough to learn the names of the city streets. Maybe he'll like us then.

Stan Fuller is going to start a store up in Sioux City. He will do well up there, after he gets used to city ways.

Charley Pickens says it isn't true that he rode in the galloping parade at Cheyenne. He was out there, but he didn't ride.

'Sausage. Think of a telephone that will not carry the sweet-toned voice that thrilled the multitude at Denver, when the panoplies of democracy range themselves behind the Peerless Leader in response to the clarion call of I Jehovah Dumm!

Aln't it awful, Mabel?

Forever. Those gallant warriors who have ranged behind Ashton the I, needn't worry. They'll be called "colony" till they're tired of being it.

Why We Like Him. We like him 'cause he's Teddy; we like him 'cause he's big. For a fuss he's always ready. He'd rather fight than jig.
