

TEDDY AND SMILE TAKE CITY

Nebraska and Omaha Join in Glad Welcome to Colonel.

CLOTHES ARE ALL WRINKLED

Black Slouch Hat is Lifted to the Crowds—Luncheon at the Field Club—Active Day for Strenuous Citizens.

With the glad abandon to homage such as might be accorded to a visiting potentate, Omaha gave itself over to a mighty reception to Theodore Roosevelt. The whole city represented by officials of top rank, big professional and business men and with notable citizens from all over the state, opened its arms to the greatest private citizen in the world.

In the mainstrom of this meeting of the man and the city, Theodore Roosevelt, the man, shown forth as a personality that shed such an impression of bigness as goes with an official director of national affairs. He appeared quite in spite of himself, a real live president to as great an extent as if he had been coming from a second inauguration to the chiefest office of the land.

In the throng of celebrities that personally paid their respects to the returned hunter were a governor, an ex-governor, mayor of the city, and several congressmen and senators, besides dozens of other city and state officials and prospective officials. There also were a number of just plain citizens, to whom the distinguished guest paid as hearty and individual attention as to the more pretentiously titled ones.

Some of those who greeted Colonel Roosevelt were Governor Shallenberger, Ex-Governor Sheldon, Mayor Dahlgren, Senator Aldrich, Lieutenant Governor Hopewell and a score of others. A few army officers, including General Smith, head of the Department of the Missouri, also walked through the several groups of new found friends around the former president.

World's Greatest Citizens. It was the coming of the world's most spectacular private citizen—the one man who, holding no office, unfettered by the gold lace of official life, brought to tumult of cheers as no other man—for the sake of the man—could do.

It was Roosevelt day in Omaha from the time the train pulled into the station. The city was attuned to the occasion, and the colonel always attended to anything he meets from a diplomatic junction in London to a rhinoceros in Africa, gave his hearty word that he was glad to be here. He did not once say the oft-repeated "d-e-lighted," but he did say "mighty glad," and his smile carried conviction of sincerity.

Omaha being the half way-house between New York and San Francisco, the gateway to the west, has within its comparatively young existence, shown hospitality to many notable persons, but no demonstration perhaps has surpassed the magnificence of the Roosevelt welcome. Grant, the man who led the army that saved the union, came once as president and later as traveler returning from his world tour; McKinley, the martyr, was here and welcomed left-time their station were forthcoming—but there was a dash about the Roosevelt welcome yesterday that was distinctly Rooseveltian in its nature. As he rode with the stride of a soldier up the depot platform, his wrinkled old black coat denoting need of a pressing establishment, Tom Flynn, the man who through political affiliation would be least expected in a Roosevelt crowd, exclaimed, "What a political mixer that man is!"

The Plain Citizen. Colonel Roosevelt, he it known, has never depended upon sartorial peacocking to carry him through life's journey. He accords conventionally with the abandon of genius, and there sets the waiting crowds to cheering. His garb as he arrived in Omaha Friday morning might well befit the conservative country merchant from the outlying districts. His old black hat was crumpled, but he viewed it with a hand that had the grip of a lion.

Hundreds of people lined the viaduct overlooking the station long before the train arrived. Others came briskly, a little late, eagerly inquiring if the colonel had gone. It was a feverish crowd, and while there was no blocking of passageways, it was an elbow-to-elbow task to squirm through. Uptown to the Omaha club, the colonel rode in Gould Dietz' automobile, seated beside Victor Rosewater, chairman of the reception committee. There, he had in accordance with the program, an open forenoon, which meant that he would not be burdened with speechmaking. Most men would have rested after the strenuous journey the colonel has been undergoing, and the open forenoon was meant for rest, yet, true to his nature he was active, and looking about the club rooms, he asked many questions about old friends in Omaha, indicating a desire to meet them.

Flat Denial from Choate

Former Ambassador Says Charges of Unprofessional Conduct Are Untrue.

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 2.—Joseph H. Choate, former ambassador to Great Britain, on being informed at his summer residence here today by the Associated Press that George W. Chamblee had asked leave to withdraw his petition for consideration by the American Bar association of charges made against Mr. Choate by John R. Waits of New York and that the association probably would take no action on the charges, made the following statement: "The charges of Mr. John R. Waits against me are absolutely unfounded and I am glad the American Bar association has disavowed all responsibility for them. "I have never acted for Mr. Waits or had any knowledge of his affairs. So far as his charges against my former firm I have heretofore come to my knowledge I have investigated them and found them to be without foundation."

Little could Murray be employed as claim agent for after leaving the Burlington Mr. Murray went to work for the Reynolds' construction company in Canada. He was for a time manager of the defunct Wabaska Electric company at Wymore, of which the late E. P. Reynolds, Jr., was owner. Good Roads Day in Merrick

County and Township Officials Inspect Mile of Model Road and Listen to Federal Expert.

CENTRAL CITY, Neb., Sept. 2.—(Special.)—The good roads fever has taken such a firm hold upon the people of Central City and Merrick county that already construction work is under way on two miles of model road out of Central City under the supervision of W. M. Dodge, the road expert sent here by the government, and there is every indication that the township boards all over the country will take up the construction of model roads as their funds permit.

Tuesday was good roads day in Central City. The Commercial club sent out invitations to the various road overseers over the county, and also had as their guests the members of the county board of supervisors, and persons interested in good roads from all over the county. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the guests were loaded into automobiles, and taken to the north boundary of the city to inspect the mile of model road in process of construction there under the supervision of the government expert. Afterwards the autos carried the party to the McCullough ranch four miles west of town where Mr. McCullough has been treating a mile of road with a King road drag for the last few months. Here they found a road where in spite of the heavy rains of the last few days, autos could be run over it at the highest rate of speed, and any kind of a load could be hauled without cutting into the roadway.

The party returned to town about 4:30 and the board of supervisors met for the purpose of passing on the proposition of devoting the inheritance tax fund in the county treasury, some $150, to the building of a model road along the Union Pacific tracks from the west boundary of the city. After some debate it was decided that the county should pay for one mile of this road, providing it did not exceed the cost of $1,200 per mile.

In the evening there was a supper served by the Women's Relief corps in Cuddington hall, to which the members of the Commercial club and its guests sat down. After the supper Mr. Dodge gave an extended talk on good roads. He said that good roads in Merrick county would probably average between $600 and $700 per mile. His address was enthusiastically received, and at its close he was pined with questions by those interested in knowing more about good roads. The good roads movement has received an impetus in Merrick county which will result in the construction of many miles of good roads before another year is passed, and already several road drags have been put to work.

Memorial Service for Bishop Hare

Convocation of Episcopal Church at Mitchell Pays Tribute to Missionary—Officers Are Elected.

MITCHELL, S. D., Sept. 2.—(Special.)—The Triennial Convocation of the Episcopal church of the state completed its session of three days here Thursday evening, which served to bring out a large number of the clergymen and the lay members of the church. During the session a memorial meeting was held in honor of the memory of the late Bishop Hare, speakers being selected from among the clergy, who have been associated with the bishop since he came to this country, thirty-six years ago, and first took up the work of religious training among the Indians in the Niobrara district. Among the speakers was Rev. Mr. Holmes, an Indian of the Santes agency, who was taken in hand by Bishop Hare, when Holmes was a small boy and was running away from the mission school. The bishop took the boy back to the school and made a sort of a protege of the lad, who finally entered the ministry, and is now a member of the priesthood and in charge of work among the Indians. The election of officers resulted as follows: Secretary, Rev. F. B. Barnett of Mitchell; registrar, Rev. Dean Biller of Sioux Falls; chancellor, J. Howard Gates of Sioux Falls; president of the council of advice, Rev. Dr. Doherty of Flandreau; delegates to the general convention, Dean Ashley of Cheyenne agency and Alfred Smith of Niobrara agency. The following resolution was adopted by the convocation concerning the death of Bishop Hare, and is the first official action of the body since the bishop's death: "The Triennial Convocation desires to place on record its deep sense of loss to the church of South Dakota through the death of the church taking to himself our beloved Bishop Hare, who for thirty-six years was guide, counselor and friend to the red man, and the white alike, leading them by his beautiful example of usefulness and holiness. The earnestness of his labors, the gentleness of his spirit and the gifts, with which he was endowed made him a power both in church and state, leading the people of South Dakota to a higher intellectual and moral plane of living."
