Dr. O. O. Smith has returned from Nevada, Mo., where he attended the national meeting of the suggestive therapeutic and metaphysical chautaugus workers, which lasted a week. Dr. Smith was interested in the chautaugus feature of the gathering to the extent that he filled a place on the program each day, and was a member of the Omaha and Nebraska party of delegates who sought to secure the next national meeting for Omaha. Dr. Smith carried an invitation from the Omaha Commercial cinb and the Nebraska men came very near capturing the prise, compelling the Nevada Business Men's association to submit a flattering offer coupled with a cash donation of $1,000 toward the expense account. A number of national celebrities attended, including Harold Boice, the author of the series of articles recently published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine-under the caption, "Christianity in the Crucible;" William Walter Atkinson of Chicasco, author of mimerous yogo philosophy books, and Henry Frank. There were delegates from abroad. It was tacitly agreed that the Nebraska delegates should have the 1913 meet. Dr. O. O. Smith has returned from Ne-

Seventh Anniversary by Doing

Little Extra Work.

Frank Walker, a well known colored man of Council Bluffs, yesterday celebrated his 97th birthday anniversary. The chief feature of the celebration was doing the hardest day's work he had performed in fifty years. He hauls garbage, and yesterday almost doubled his customary area.

Walker was born September 1, 1813, in Bath county, Virginia. He was a slave, owned by Jack Frey, and before manhood was reached he became the property of Divers Frey, son of the elder. The first stirring incident in Walker's life came soon after he was taken over by his master's son. A dashing Virginia cavaller named Carter Harrison, with expensive tastes and an uncertain income, lured the young slave into running away with him and being sold in the slave market at Richmond. Walker says the white man promised to give him half the sale price, and he consented. The plan worked all right with the exception that the young slave did not get any of the money, but fell into the possession of a hard master, who took him into South Carolina and to New Orleans, Shortly before the civil war broke out the slave was sold to a man named Walker, who became an officer in the confederate army. Walker was the kindest master the old negro ever had, as well as the last, so he assumed his master's name and still retains it. At the master's name and still retains it. The strain of the flight and the Mabel A. He has lived in Council Bluffs for more than twenty years, and those who remember seeing him twenty years ago do not perceive that he has aged a particle since. He is never sick, never fails to do his hard daily toll, discharging the most unpleasant duties singing happily and his face beaming in smiles.

Walker lives in a little cottage at Twenty-first street and Tweaty-thire avenue, with a wife who is many years his junior. N. Y. Plumbing Co. Tel. 50. Night L-1702.

J. A. Miller returned last evening from Denver, after spending two weeks' vacation there and in other portions of Colorado. Mr. Miller says that a large part of Colorado Mr. Miller says that a large part of Colorado. Mr. Miller says that a large part of Colorado has suffered seriously this season from the long drouth, and that farmers say it has been the hottest, windlest and driest summer they have ever known in the state. Crops are seriously injured in the portions he visited, especially in Morgan county, where farmers were cutting their corn and cane in the effort to save as much of it as possible for fodder. As a crowning misfortune, Mr. Miller says, the state was visited not only by a killing frost, but a hard freeze last week, destroying the last hope of a crop. Even around Denver all kinds of summer vegetation except hardy grasses and forest trees were cut down by the freeze. He declared that the farmers would have little to ship out this season and that the usual supply of potatoes that have come from the state would be missing this year.
