ing for the colonel had a long talk with Senator Dolliver, who was on the train with him. It was as follows:

"I was particularly pleased with what the president said in his letter on the subject of the tariff commission, and I am glad that Colonel Roosevelt. A number of senators and congressmen have for some years advocated this as the proper method of dealing with the tariff, and I am definitely awakened to the idea that a tariff commission offers the only solution of the problem, which is both rational and ensures the absence of jobbery. The president from the beginning advocated this commission. I believe that the fact that the amendment proposing to provide for a commission in the original bill when the tariff bill was under consideration in the senate was introduced by your own senator here, present—Senator Dolliver. It was a characteristic act of service to the people on the senator's part, and I wish to take this opportunity of saying that throughout my term as president on every important question it was my privilege to stand shoulder to shoulder with Senator Dolliver. Let me add, my friends, that what I have said on Senator Dolliver's behalf is not only true, but I am sure that I have said it with the approval of my friend, Congressman Martin, although he is not from Iowa, but from South Dakota. He also is a man who absolutely stood by me on every point throughout my term, and I am sure that he will work in hearty sympathy for every progressive policy. All three of these men I found, after trying them out, stood without hitching—perhaps that simile suits South Dakota better than Iowa, where I should like to think they never hitched on the rails. It was only after a bitter fight that the friends of the commission idea in the senate and the house got through the provision. It is not yet in satisfactory shape. The commission itself should be enlarged, and its powers greatly enlarged and defined, and any necessary change made that will make its work more effective from the standpoint both of the executive and congress. But the establishment of it makes an excellent beginning in the right direction. Moreover, the value of the right direction which has been made real by the action of the administration in constructing in broad fashion the law that provided for it.

Maximum and Minimum. There is another feature of the tariff law which is of value and points our course in the right direction, maximum and minimum provision. And here again I wish to point out that the value of the provision has depended largely on the excellent work done by the administration in the negotiations with foreign powers for the application of the tariff. The negotiations with the dominion of Canada were the most difficult of all, and yet, in my eyes, the most important, because I esteem it of vital consequence that we should always be on relations of the highest friendship and good will with our growing neighbor to the north.

"In addition, it was of very real importance to provide, as the present tariff does provide, for proper treatment of the Philippines. I believe in such a tariff measure of protection as will equalize the cost of production here and abroad, and equalize the labor cost," said Colonel Roosevelt.

"I believe in such supervision in the working of law as to make certain that the protected industry gives that difference to the men that we are most anxious to protect, and if I found out that is not given I would take off the tariff due on the particular thing. I believe in protection on that basis as a principle, but when it is a mere jumble of preferences and privileges then I am against it."

Short Speech by Dolliver. Continued calls for Senator Dolliver brought him to his feet. Declaring that he would hold as the greatest business he would have to his children the fact that he had stood with Colonel Roosevelt when presidents of the United States, he paid a tribute to the work being carried on by the colonel.

Representative Hubbard said declaring that he had voted against the law, but because he did not think it fulfilled the pledges of the republican party, praised the colonel for his present course in advocating what he termed policies for the good of the people.

Congress and the Tariff. "Whenever men just like ourselves—probably not much better, and certainly no worse—continually fail to give us the results we have a right to expect from their efforts, we may just as well make up our minds that the fault lies, not in their personality, but in the conditions under which they work, and profit comes, not from denouncing them, but in seeing that the conditions are changed. This is especially true of tariff-making. It has been conclusively shown, by experiments repeated again and again, that the methods of tariff-making by congress, which have now obtained for so many years, cannot, from the very nature of the case, bring really satisfactory results.

"The present tariff, made by the same methods as its predecessor, and as that predecessor's predecessor, there is grave dissatisfaction. The people know that there are some things in it which are not right, and therefore they tend to suspect, as I think, the more numerous things in it which are right. They know that the system on which it was made, the same system on which its predecessors were made, encourages a scramble of selfish interests, to which the all-important

OFFICIALS TO ENFORCE LAW

Plans on Foot to Test Act Limiting Number of Saloons in City.

PYTHIANS TO MEET IN DES MOINES

Dr. J. F. Cole of Oelwein Stated to Be Next Grand Chancellor—Hundred Fifty Thousand Fair Receipts.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, Sept. 3.—(Special Telegram.)—It is learned that preparations are under way to secure a test of the state law which limits the number of saloons in any city or town of less than 10,000 population of the population. The law was passed by the last legislature and was intended to prevent overdoing the saloon business. A clause was inserted, however, to permit continuation of all the then existing licenses until their expiration, so as not to compel confiscation of an license and under this clause there have been renewals and extensions so that in effect it has nullified the law. State officials and others are convinced that the law will prevent any extension or transfer of license where the limit is exceeded and they will go to court and ask strict enforcement of the law.

Country for Protection. "I believe this country is fully committed to the principle of protection, but it is to protection as a principle; to protection primarily in the interest of the standard of living of the American workingman. I believe that when protection becomes, not a principle, but a privilege and a preference—or, rather, a jumble of privileges and preferences—then the American people disapprove of it. Now, to correct the trouble it is necessary, in the first place, to get in mind clearly what we want, and, in the next place, to get in mind clearly the protection which we hope to obtain what we want. What we want is a square deal in the tariff as in everything else; a square deal for the employer, and a square deal for the general public. To obtain it we must have a thoroughly efficient and well-equipped tariff commission.

MOCK DUEL MAY BE FATAL. Revolver Used by Maine Boy in Play Was Loaded with Ball Cartridge. KINOMAN, Me., Sept. 3.—A mock duel, fought by two boys, may have a tragic ending for Floyd O'Rourke, son of Deputy Sheriff T. K. O'Rourke. While playing with Clifford Larrabee, aged 13, O'Rourke proposed they have a duel, using their revolvers and rifles. Physicians thought he had an even chance for recovery.

Wyoming Miners Will Not Strike

Temporary Agreement Reached at Denver Makes Suspension of Work Unnecessary.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Sept. 3.—(Special Telegram.)—A general satisfaction over the state today as a result of advice from Denver last night that the 7,000 coal miners of Wyoming will not go on strike, as was feared, pending a settlement of their grievances at a meeting to be held in Cheyenne on September 9. Under the temporary agreement reached in Denver yesterday between the operators and representatives of the miners, the latter secure many of the concessions demanded, and they say some of these will result in higher wages. Both sides made concessions, and the best of feeling has prevailed during the conferences. It is expected the agreement will be ratified on September 9, and the troubles will end without the loss of a minute from the work or the closing down of a single property.

Plan Test of Game Law. WATERTOWN, S. D., Sept. 3.—(Special Telegram.)—The attorney general, General S. W. Clark, State Game Warden W. F. Bancroft is ready to fight out in the courts the question of whether or not the game law is constitutional. The issue was raised by the case of the State of South Dakota, who contends that the law is unconstitutional. The law provides for a license fee of $1 from resident hunters and $15 from non-resident hunters is a discrimination that will not stand up in supreme court. In submitting his opinion, the attorney general says that the supreme court has already passed upon the right of a state to tax a non-resident more than a resident. He advises the state game warden, and all county game wardens as well, to bring proceedings without hesitation under the law as it now stands.

C. W. POST FILES LABOR SUIT

(Continued from First Page.) J. W. Van Cleave, who died May 15, of this year. The complainant, Post, states in his petition that he is a stockholder of the Bucks company and that his interests and those of the company will suffer by reason of the proposed agreement. A meeting by the American Federation of Labor and the company officers has been set for next Tuesday, and it was to head off possible action that the suit was filed today.

It is claimed among other things that the consummation of the proposed agreement would deprive the store company of any ultimate benefit of the good of thousands of dollars lost because of the union boycott and that irreparable injury to the concern will result because of the destruction of prestige it gained through its victory over the labor unions in the District of Columbia. A claim for damages in the sum of $750,000, alleged to be the result of the boycott is set up under the Sherman act, making the case identical in many respects with the famous Danbury hat suit in which the hatry recovered $250,000 as the result of a boycott by the labor unions.

The petitioner charges that the present directorate of the Bucks company is about to enter a deal to thwart any effort on the part of the company to collect damages sustained through the boycott. Allegations in Petition. After reciting the history of the Bucks' case from the date of its inception, in 1906, when the Metal Polishers' union went on strike, down to the present time, it is charged that, though the strike was without cause as afterwards stated by Chief Justice Taft, the equity court of the District of Columbia, the Federation of Labor instituted the boycott as a part of a conspiracy to wreck a firm which had presumed to insist upon the right of all men to work for their families and themselves.

Following the death of J. W. Van Cleave, who had been the backbone of the company's opposition to the union leaders, it is alleged Fred W. Gardner, a majority stockholder, assumed managerial control of the company and planned to change its policy to its detriment.

The petitioner explains he made every effort to prevent a consummation of the proposed deal to close the plant of the Bucks company, and that the result of his efforts has been to gain from Mr. Gardner the emphatic announcement that the deal was carried out. It is further alleged that it is proposed by the defendant company's present directorate to violate a contract with the American Anti-Boycott association, which is prosecuting the case against Gompers and his associates, now pending in the supreme court. This contract was entered into during the life of Mr. Van Cleave.

REV. HANDEL TO EXPLAIN

Rector Who Officiated at Heinze-Henderson Wedding on Carpet.

ACTED IN VIOLATION OF RULES

Man Now in Limelight Gained a Reputation in Colorado, There Being a Cowboy and Expert Shot.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—(Special Telegram.)—Rev. Harry A. Handel, who gained considerable reputation for his strenuous fight in Colorado, and who is known in Episcopal circles as the "clerical handyman," is preparing an answer to the demands for an explanation by Bishop Burgess of Long Island as to why he united in marriage F. Augustus Heinze, the Montana copper millionaire, to Mrs. Henderson, a Broadway chorus girl, and a divorced woman. Rev. Frederick Burgess, bishop of Long Island, has allowed no time to elapse before demanding an explanation from Rev. Mr. Handel as to why he should violate a rule of the church which relates to the marrying of divorced persons. Bishop Burgess, even among Episcopalians, is conspicuous for his views on divorce and remarriage. He has spoken against the marrying of divorcees, both in public and in private, and he was consequently shocked when he learned that one of his coadjutors in his own diocese had entered into a marital transaction which was not only advertised in an oblique light, but which concerned the remarriage of a woman who was but recently released by the courts from her bonds of wedlock.

Just what defense Rev. Handel will make is not known, but from his impetuous temperament it is suggested by his friends that he will be perfectly able to handle his side of the approaching controversy. Rev. Harry A. Handel is known as the "clerical handyman." He lived for years in Colorado, where he acquired a reputation for strenuousness. He was born in England, forty-two years ago, and after his ordination, settled in Meeker, Colo., where he gained a wide reputation by building his own church entirely by himself. He started in with a shovel and excavated the ground for the building, put in the stonework, carried the wood and laid the brick with his own hands. He did all this because his congregation was poor. He also built a rectory where cowboys, hunters and stockmen were always sure of a welcome, and because he could not afford a housekeeper, he did his own cooking. He has also been a cowboy and is an expert shot. When Mr. Roosevelt was at Meeker he entertained him at the rectory, and since his appointment to the first department of chaplainship, he has been almost as popular with the fire fighters here as he was with the cowboys out west.

PAN-AMERICAN CONFERENCE FINISHES IMPORTANT WORK

Newspapers of Germany Fear the 'Unlabeled' Goods of the South American Trade. LONDON, Sept. 3.—(Special Telegram.)—Developments during the closing weeks of the Pan-American conference in Buenos Ayres, were followed with especially keen attention here and in Berlin. The outcome of the quiet, unostentatious work of the Washington delegation, headed by Henry White, so long president of the American embassy in London and a leading figure at the Algiers conference, has made a deep impression upon statesmen and exporting merchants in both capitals. In both there is a clearer sense than ever before of the ultimate bearing of the good offices of the United States in promoting international solidarity in the three Americas.

That the trade and social evolution of the Americas is being followed by the United States, was indicated by the conference, and this, too, without impairment of the independence of any, is the inference drawn in England. Organs of the German commercial interests again were the Berlin authorities against "The dangers to our primary in South American commerce if the Pan-American propaganda of Mr. Blaine and his successors is advanced in the next international conference work at the last twenty years. It is considered remarkable that the proceedings did not bring forth a single minority report. The fact is characterized as "quite without precedent" and as "indicative of the early dissipation of distrust long felt by the Latin-Americans regarding the Anglo-Saxon-American."

Says a London week end comment: "Though no really contentious question was raised in the program, throughout the result is fundamentally a triumph of sentiment. Mr. Knox may felicitate himself upon the return of the good will between Washington and the South American states that Mr. Root's memorable tour did so much to create and a certain distrust of Zelaya tended to dissipate."

INTEREST IN AVIATION GROWS

Curtiss May Try and Defend the Cup at the Meeting of Bird-Men This Fall. NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—(Special Telegram.)—Glenn H. Curtiss, the aviator, has arranged for a conference with the contest committee of the Aero Club of America, when he will be officially apprised of the conditions governing the international competition for the cup at the meeting of aeromantics on Long Island later in the autumn.

From the present outlook it is quite likely that Curtiss will be officially selected by the Aero club to defend the cup. His aeroplanes will be decked with American colors and his flights in the contest will be marked with patriotic speeches. Among the aviation enthusiasts in this city it is believed that the date of the international tournament will be changed. Several of the leading aviators, among them Captains Baldwin, Clifford Harman, Alfred Le Blanc and others have made arrangements to compete in the contests which will be held in St. Louis, starting on October 17. The international tournament here was originally scheduled to take place October 15, but application was made to move the date up five days, making the tournament start on October 20.

Interest in aviation is steadily growing, being fostered by inter-city flights. Much interest has been aroused in the announcement that A. J. Drexel, a Philadelphia millionaire who has been making spectacular flights in England, would compete in the international tournament. It is not known whether Mr. Drexel will fly as an Englishman or an American, albeit his native place of residence is Philadelphia. A number of millionaire aviators will take part and a serious accident would be of unusual consequence, due to the fact that some one of great wealth would be likely to be the victim.

EAST AND WEST JOIN HANDS

The present enterprise in a sort of departure for her, but her friends predict that she will be able to carry it through to victory and in this way will aid, unobtrusively, the cause of the working girl from untimely oblivion. In connection with the same project there is said to be another. This second plan embraces the founding of a great home for girls, where they may live with the comforts that they would enjoy among their families. While the primary object is to assist girls to success, there is a strong tendency to dissuade girls unfitted for arduous and literary effort from pursuing barren fields and thus falling prey to inebrious men.
