SAMPECK CLOTHES

For Men, Young Men and Boys

ARE READY TO WEAR

There is not an overcoat or suit in America today (possibly excepting a custom tailor's highest priced product) that can conscientiously be compared to a "Sampeck"—in design, tailoring, fabric, in fact in every feature. They instantly compel the interest of vigorous young business chaps. They are indubitably the STANDARD of America. They are exclusively here, in Omaha—and ready for your approbation, in full

BYERS BEGINS EXPRESS FIGHT

Files Petition on Own Accord to Secure Reduction of Charges in the State—McCull to Succeed Cozson.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)
DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 9.—(Special Telegram.)—Gifford Pinchot, ex-forester, arrived in the city at noon today from St. Paul, having come with Henry Wallace, the newly elected president of the national conservation congress, and he was given a luncheon by leading business men. He was introduced by Senator Cummins and discussed briefly the main points in the conservation program. He declared that not until the moral side of the question had appeared were they able to make the movement a national one, that it with reluctance that he and his friends had been forced to make the fight on special interests but that they are now in the fight to stay. Mr. Pinchot complimented Mr. Wallace and declared he had never before seen anyone so quickly capture a convention as he did at St. Paul. Mr. Pinchot left for the east this evening.

Fight on Express Rates.

Proceedings were begun today before the state railroad commission by Attorney General Byers to force a reduction in express rates in Iowa like that ordered in Illinois. He filed a petition setting forth that under the express rate order of the Iowa board as made last year, the companies have been able to, in fact, secure larger revenues than ever from their Iowa business. He declares the rates to be extortionate and illegal and demands a reduction. This is the first time the attorney general has ever taken independent action on a rate matter.

McCull the Candidate.

The senatorial commission of the district now represented in the state senate by George Cozson, the candidate for attorney general, has selected Anthony McCull of Woodward as the republican candidate to fill the vacancy caused by the Cozson resignation.

HYMENEAL.

Olson-Johnson.
HOLDREGE, Neb., Sept. 9.—(Special.)—Adolph Olson, widely known as one of the best trap shooters in the country, was married last night to Miss Caroline Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Johnson at the bride's home south of this city. Rev. F. N. Swanberg of the Swedish Lutheran church was the officiating clergyman. After an elaborate wedding supper the couple left for an extensive western tour, returning through the principal cities of Canada and the northern part of this country. They will be at home at Sioux City after December 1.

Wilson Back at Washington Ready to Work

Takes Up Estimates for Department of Agriculture as First Duty on Return from Western Trip.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(Special Telegram.)—Secretary James Wilson returned today to the Department of Agriculture and at once took up estimates for the coming fiscal year. Most of the summer he has spent in the west inspecting national forests, experiment stations and the forest products laboratory. The secretary was visited by a number of bureau chiefs, who called to pay their respects and submit their contributions to the estimates. Just what these figures will be it is, of course, impossible to say. Last year the cost of running the department amounted to about $15,000,000, of which $1,000,000 was for meat inspection. The meat inspection ran close within $100,000 of the appropriation. It is possible that this year more money will be needed. This will bring up the question whether the packers will pay any part of the cost. For the regular appropriation to run the various branches of the department probably more money will be asked than last year. It is of record that Senator Money of Mississippi last year on the floor of the senate said that the secretary of agriculture had been too economical in the appropriations he asked for. It was the first time a cabinet officer had been subjected to such a charge. The bureau chiefs, as a whole, expressed the hope there would be no occasion this year to repeat it. The postmaster at Elm Creek, Neb., has applied for authority to open a postal savings bank in his office. Rural free delivery carriers appointed are as follows: Nebraska—Holdrege, route 4, Oscar J. Swanberg, carrier; Ethel Swanberg, substitute; south Dakota—Irene, route 2, Cornelius J. Butler, carrier; Patrick E. Slowsky, substitute. Julia J. Sandy has been appointed postmaster at Dale Creek, Wyo., vice N. C. Fickett, resigned.

ROOSEVELT BARS LORIMER

Former President Plays Graft in Speech to Hamilton Club.

MUCH DISCUSSION OF INCIDENT

Senator Declines to Comment on the Situation When Seen by a Chicago Reporter—Big Preparations Pleading.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt today barred William Lorimer, junior United States senator from Illinois, from the Hamilton club banquet at the Congress hotel by refusing to sit at the same table. In his address before the club tonight, the senator, standing in the presence of 1,200 men, nearly all of them citizens of the state of Illinois, and the majority of them prominent in politics and business life, brought his hearers to wild enthusiasm by his scathing denunciation of the political conditions in Illinois. The great banquet hall at the Congress hotel, which has been the scene of gatherings of this kind almost without number, never witnessed such a scene nor echoed to such a tumult as followed the close of Colonel Roosevelt's address. The members of the Hamilton club, under whose auspices the banquet was given, together with their guests stood on chairs and tables, waving handkerchiefs in the wildest manner while they cheered the speaker at the top of their voices. Colonel Roosevelt always has been a favorite of the Hamilton club and it has on many previous occasions given him tokens of appreciation and affection. Never before, however, had it paid him such a tribute as was rendered tonight. After his introduction, Colonel Roosevelt declared that he was about to talk on delicate matters, which, nevertheless, were matters to be treated only with directness. Following this he took up the condition in Illinois politics described by witnesses in the present trial of the O'Neil brothers for bribery in connection with the election of William Lorimer to the United States senate. "Read the confessions of those four members of that Illinois legislature who have appeared in the case," declared Colonel Roosevelt. "Read the evidence obtained by the state's attorneys of two counties and know that Illinois politics cannot be cured by ignoring what is going on."

Cheer for Cannon.

After ending his speech, Colonel Roosevelt was to have attended a reception in another room of the hotel. He tried to reach this room but for some time was unable to make his way through the cheering crowd. As he left the platform some one started a cheer for Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the house of representatives. This was taken up until the speaker arose from the table.

During the Roosevelt speech.

Speaker Cannon received much attention from the audience. It had been rumored during the day that in case any reference to him were made by Colonel Roosevelt, and to which the speaker took exception, answer had been prepared. Colonel Roosevelt made no reference to that Illinois congressman.

Test of Address.

When introduced by President Batten of the Hamilton club, Colonel Roosevelt was greeted with tumultuous applause lasting several minutes. His address in part was as follows: "I have had a long and to me, a most pleasant and profitable connection with this club. I have known you before I had attained any special prominence in public life and when I came back from the Cuban campaign, it was a committee of your club that was practically the first organization to meet me. When I was inaugurated as governor, a body of representatives of this club was present. I think it was this club which was practically the first organization so unwise as to formulate a desire to have me made president. It was at an address at the Hamilton club that I used the expression, 'strenuous life,' an expression which from that day to this I have never been able to use, and whenever I have come to you or whenever I have spoken either to this club, or whenever I have spoken in Chicago I have always addressed myself to the instant need of things for it would not be worth your while to have me and it would not be worth my while to come if I could not speak exactly as I thought upon the questions of the hour. "I feel that when I am in Chicago I am in my own city, that I am in one of the centers of the expression of the vital American spirit. Your problems are my problems, for your problems are problems of the American people."

Two Sources of Danger.

"Now there are just two sources of danger to the American people—lawless violence and corruption; lawless violence that we must often have to face from among the people who have least of the world's goods and corruption, which we most often have to face from among the people that have most of the world's goods. "In the program tonight you have done me the honor to print certain quotations from speeches I have made, mostly before the Hamilton club, and the final quotation is, 'We must see that there is civic honesty, civic cleanliness, civic good sense, in our whole administration of city, state and nation."

"My friends, the value of a sentence like that comes exclusively in the way in which we try to live up to it. The worth of what I have to say to you and whether or not it is worth your while to listen to me, depends upon the way in which we translate words into deeds. It is all right to applaud a sentence like that in favor of civic honesty, stating that civic honesty is essential to the welfare of a nation. It is well enough to applaud it, but woe to you if you applaud the sentence in the abstract and fail to act up to it in the concrete."

"It has been well said that the progress, the true progress of a people, can best be gauged by their standard of moral conduct, by their judgment as to what conduct is moral and what conduct is immoral, and by the effectiveness with which they make the approbation of the moral and their disapprobation of the immoral felt."

"Each state of the union, each important city of the union, has from time to time to face this question. More than once we have been brought face to face with it in the state of New York. You are advised with fit it now in the state of Illinois."

Read Reports of Trial.

"I have been reading the reports of the investigations of the two state's attorneys, which resulted in the indictment of four members of the legislature and together with that I have read the reports of the confessions of four others. You are advised on this matter, because it was a delicate subject, and he added that no one had been convicted."

"Now I feel most strongly that we make the question of public honesty a sham if we use the use of the word 'honesty' to mere law."

"There are big business men whom I have counted as among the most insidious enemies of the real welfare of this republic, although they have been so advised that it would be impossible to convict them, and there has been in the United States and there has been in New York many public men whose careers have been scandalized throughout the country, although they keep clear of the courts."

"Read the confessions of the four men. Read what was developed by the two state's attorneys, one belonging to one party and one belonging to the other, about the four men against whom they secured indictments and about other men also. Read the evidence obtained by the state's attorneys of two counties and intelligence not to come to the conclusion that the legislature whose doings have been exposed was guilty of the foulest and basest corruption, and, therefore, of the most infamous treason to American institutions."

American Before Party.

"Now, I am a good party man, but I am an American first. But when we come to questions affecting the vital principles of life I know no party. I take just this much account of party in such a case. While I will do my best to hold the honor of my party, I will try if possible a little harder to get hold of the thief of my own party."

"When I was president I endeavored to act so that there should be no need of raising the cry among my opponents of 'turn the rascal out,' because I turned them out myself just as fast as I could get at them."

"Now, mark you, take my words as worth less than nothing unless in looking back you can see that they were justified by my deeds. In making investigations I struck two different sorts of cases. There was one set of cases where prosecutions would lie. In those cases I turned the matter over to the Department of Justice. In addition there was the larger class of cases where there was not sufficient ground for prosecution, but where it was evident that the man was an unfit and improper public servant; and there I turned him out; and when now and then the man back of him, occasionally belonging to a co-ordinate branch of the government, would come up and say, 'Oh, there is no conviction against him,' I said, 'No, I dare say he has practiced law honesty, but he is a crook and out he goes.'"

"Now, I could do that with the appointive offices, who held office under me; with the elective officers there is but one body that can do that and that is the people. It depends upon you, upon the people of America, whether you will permit a man to represent you because he has been acquitted in a court of law, or that there has been a mistrial; enough jurors have believed in him to get him off; whether you permit that man to represent you or whether you will take the stand that where you have evidence of a kind that may not be legal, but which convinces every honest man of intelligence, whether you will submit to the pollution of American life by putting such a man in high official position."

Flatterers Always Exist.

"In each nation, in every form of government, there are base flatterers. Some individual who in a monarchy would be a courtier and flatter the king, in a republic turns demagogue and flatters those whom he thinks will cast the most votes. He is just the same man, the one just as base as the other, only that they are functioning under different conditions. It is a favorite assertion of that type of public men when some public servant has been found guilty of conduct that should disgrace him to say, 'We will go to the people for his vindication; we will see if we can't secure him an election.' Some times they succeed. A great many thoroughly good people, thoroughly good citizens, have no special means of information, are ignorant of what really has happened, and may on occasions like that be misled, but if they are misled and if they do, so far as in them lies, attempt to vindicate a dishonest and unfaithful public servant by electing him, they don't translate words into deeds; they disgrace themselves and us."

"In other forms of government than ours there may be a certain kind of progress, even if the average man is not what he should be, but in our government, in a great democracy like ours, the stream cannot rise higher than its source. You cannot have honesty in public life unless the average citizen demands honesty in public life."

Europe's Attitude Toward America.

"Last spring, in Europe, there were two things that struck me especially as I talked with the average man. The first was that that man looked toward America as the land of golden hope, as the land of a partially realized ideal, as a land where it really was being shown that the people could govern themselves justly and righteously and in their own interest."

"And the second thing was that that faith in America was continually being shaken by stories that reached them of corruption in American business and in American public life. Every act of corruption here, every gross scandal, every bit of rampant dishonesty in big business or in politics or in connection with the complex web that weaves together strands of big business and strands of politics—every such instance, when carried abroad, brings sneering satisfaction to the heart of every reactionary."

"My friends, I ask you men of Illinois that you purify your politics that you hold accountable the scoundrel, great or small, who has been guilty of corruption, that you insist on cleanliness in your public life, and I ask it in your name and for your sake, I ask it for the sake of the American people, and I ask it for the sake of all the nations of the world; that their hope may not be made dim and that they continue to cherish the ideal of the possibility of having a government of, by and for the people, that shall mean also the government of justice and the government of honesty."

THREE REPUBLICANS ABSENT

loved by a second request that these persons come to the committee room and deliberate. The request was once more denied.

It was apparent that the republican absentees feared that should they attend it would give the five members who voted Wednesday for the resolution of Mr. Madison an opportunity to bring up the previous question and possibly secure ratification of the action of the four democratic members and the one insurgent republican.

A statement giving the reason of their refusal to attend was sent to the meeting. Senator Nelson requested that adjournment be taken until Monday and the meeting be held in Chicago. This he said, would give Senator Root an opportunity to be present. No action was taken on this proposition. The democrats were not disposed to delay any longer. Senator Nelson soon after left the room and the meeting for the time being was without a chairman.

Statement by Mr. Madison.

Representative Madison, speaking for himself and the four democratic members, said: The committee at its last session in Washington, adjourned to meet in Minneapolis September 5, for the purpose of formulating reports to congress. The committee met in pursuance of this adjournment.

"There were eight members present, constituting a majority. At the request of South Dakota Man Deported.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Sept. 9.—(Special.)—The first person to be deported from South Dakota, so far as can be remembered, is a young man named Lawrence Mayland, who a few days ago started from Kingsbury county on his compulsory return to the old country. He appeared in that part of the state about eighteen months ago, and during his residence had continuously been classed as an undesirable citizen. He was afflicted by a "lazy bug," and declined to work for a living. As he had no visible means of support, and was not in the best of health, the national authorities were notified, and they have compelled the steamship com-
