In fact there are ever so many which carry a swivel of hair, a puff of two and a few curls and claim they are in the hair business—and it is in just these places that you can't get your money's worth. They don't know how to buy. They don't do much business and their stock is dilapidated and out of style. This business is like all others. Washington Social Gossip

New York's Influence in Capital is to Be More Than Ever Demonstrated During the Coming Season—Some of the Women Who Are Responsible for This State of Affairs—Some Personal Notes of Interest.

BY CONSTANCE CARRUTHERS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(Special to The Bee.)—The approaching social season in Washington will show the peculiar fact that society here, in season, is dominated completely by New York. Washington has practically lost control of its own society, and with the approach of September Washington begins to shake out fine feathers, preparatory to the opening of a new society year.

There is a rapid waving and swishing of feather dusters, which is being marked with a spick and span and inviting the houses wherein the season's entertaining will be in full sway. As a fine example of the White House it is now shining in all its old-time glory, having just passed through a period of renovation.

All these preparations for the gay winter to come are not confined to residences alone, but in the fashionable thoroughfares as well. The avenue of the presidents, or of the ambassadors, as sixteenth street is being called by some of the most ambitious of its residents, has exchanged the old gas lamp posts, which were illuminated in length for gorgeous electric globes, topped by spreading eagles, which give to the most imposing of Washington's beautiful avenues a new air of distinction.

The news of the recall of the Swedish minister, Mr. de Lagerchants, which has just been made public, is being received with sincere regret by the many friends of the minister and his attractive family.

The minister and Mme. de Lagerchants came to Washington in April, 1907, and their two daughters were presented to society the following year. The minister and his family sailed for Europe early in the summer. Until a successor shall have been appointed, the legation will be in charge of Mr. W. A. F. Elkensgren, whose wife was Miss Laura Jackson.

To get back to the very interesting topic to which I alluded in the previous paragraph, and local society being dominated by New York it is well to say that a consistent effort has been made to maintain the social leadership of the capital in the hands of Washingtonians, or of such foreign residents as have so long been identified with this city as to cause them to be regarded as local citizens. But the New York clan is much in evidence, and it bids fair to increase. While most of the members of New York families have a place in the Four Hundred they are not of the Four Hundred. They have created a circle of their own that takes a cosmopolitan air. There are the Perry Belmonts, whose house will be thrown open to a select aggregation of people for a christening toast late in October. There are the Edson Bradleys, whose activities during the next season will be even more striking than those of the last two years.

Mrs. Chamcree M. Dewey, sponsor of the salon and caterer to the intellectualists of Washington life, will bring about the first entertainments that will be looked upon as the actual launching of the salon in Washington. She has confided to some of her
