BALDRIGE TALKS OF TRUTH

Omahan Reports Feeling in England Against American Goods.

INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION IS ON

H. H. Baldrige Addresses Commercial Club Men—Says Children Suffer in England—Ireland's Population Depleted by America.

"There is some feeling in England against American importations," said H. H. Baldrige to the executive committee of the Commercial club Tuesday noon, in a talk on his impressions of British industrial condition. "There are rumors circulating that the inspectors in this country are not thorough and that American packing products are not wholesome. An industrial revolution is now going on in Britain with the tariff as the turning point. Joe Chamberlain is still trying for lower rates, but Lloyd George, who wants the 'tariff' especially on liquors, has a large following. "Labor conditions are bad. Children are worked under bad conditions and for long hours. In Manchester I saw groups of children ranging in age from 12 to 19 coming out of the factories. They wore shoes with wooden uppers and steel soles of a sort I never saw before, and when they came down the street they made as much noise as an army of men. "Most of my visit, however, was spent in Ireland. In 1840 Ireland had a population of about 8,000,000 and now there are only 4,500,000 there. The depletion of the population has been due to a great extent to emigration to the United States. Many men whom I asked said they would like to come to this country if they could find it possible and many men who had married and thus become attached to the soil regretted that they had not come as youths. The people you see on the streets are for the most part very young or very old. They have all heard numerous stories of the wealth of the Irish Americans and this impression is strengthened by the fact that the greatest aid to them in their own economic troubles comes from their friends over here. "The government has established a Congested District board which can take over the land from obdurate landlords and sell it to the tenants on easy terms. There are still a few evictions, but as I was shown in one case the Irish hang on to their homes and try every sort of tactics to keep possession. "There are no manufacturers of importance in Ireland excepting one big brewery in Dublin. The old age pensions of the government are a great help to the poor."

REVIEW PRIZES PAMPHLET

Supplement of New York Times Says Omaha Publicity Book is Fine Piece of Work.
 The pamphlet, "Omaha of Today," a series of illustrations published by the Publicity Bureau of the Commercial club, has received the following complimentary notice in the "Saturday Review," the book-reviewing supplement of the New York Times:
 "Omaha of Today" pamphlet so entitled gives one a lively sense of the growth and enterprise of that not-long-since pioneer or frontier settlement. The double page bird's-eye view is the most impressive of the thirty-eight plates of which the pamphlet consists; but an easterner is apt to be surprised by the size and beauty of such buildings as the high school and the Omaha National bank, and the eight-story apartment houses here pictured—to say nothing of the club houses and city and suburban private dwellings.
