Health and Beauty Answers BY MRS. MAE MARTYN Mrs. R. S.: Wrinkles and other marks of approaching old age which now worry you are very common. However, you will not have to worry if you will follow this simple treatment. Apply to your face every night a grassless cream jelly made by mixing two teaspoonfuls glycerine and one ounce alcohol into one-half pint cold water. Stir and let stand several hours before using.

Washington Social Gossip

Question of Who is Leader Answered by the Statement that There is None—Different "Sets" that Contest the Doings of the Capital Smart Folks—Some Interesting Bits of Personal Gossip that Are Now Current.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—(Special to the Bee.)—The question is not infrequently asked who is the leader of Washington society and the answer is about the same as to the question as to snakes in Ireland. There are a dozen or more different sets in Washington society, each with its leader or leaders, but there is no one dominant figure such as the late Mrs. Astor was in New York. Conditions are responsible for this. Washington is essentially a city of changes. Men and women come and go as in no other place in the world. It would be supposed that the lady of the White House would be the social arbiter, but this is not so.

The White House set necessarily changes as the occupants of the White House change. It reflects the personal tastes of the ruler of the nation and of the first lady of the land. Necessarily, also, political expediency cannot be wholly left out in arranging many of the White House gatherings, yet the private entertainments more often than not are made up of those who are genuinely congenial to the White House occupants.

Official society takes its cue largely from the White House set, but it also has many activities of its own. Its leaders are drawn from the families of those senators, representatives and other government officials who have social standing, wealth and ability to contribute to the gaiety of the social season.

The most brilliant set is the diplomatic, but here, too, the personal changes so frequently that it is next to impossible for any one person to achieve and hold a position of dominance.

And so it is in the army and navy, the congressional and the other sets. The old Washingtonians are exclusive, but they form but a small section of the social life of the city.

With the coming of the diplomats come rumors of some changes in the corps, not only in the chiefs, but among the secretaries and attaches. One that will be widely regretted is the transfer of the British military attaché, Lieutenant Colonel James, and the Hon. Mrs. James. During the three seasons they have spent here their charming and frequent hospitalities have afforded

A Race of Baldheads

Eminent scientists tell us that all races are gradually changing—getting nearer and nearer to the new race which is to dominate the earth, a race in which each individual will be a "composite"—a blending of all present nationalities. One authority even goes so far as to predict that this new race will be entirely bald.
