GRAIN EXCHANGE ELECTION
Non-Grain Men Retire from the Board of Directors.
BOARD HAS ALL GRAIN MEN

Holmquist, Saunders and Hynes Succeeded Bruce, Reed and A. C. Smith—Holmquist Gets All Votes but His Own.

J. W. Holmquist, Sherman Saunders and W. J. Hynes have been nominated by members of the Omaha Grain exchange as directors to succeed E. E. Bruce, A. L. Reed and A. C. Smith. The nomination of Messrs. Holmquist, Saunders and Hynes means not only that the last of the non-grain men will leave the boards of directors of the exchange but that the smaller elevator men have triumphed over the big line interests.

Twenty-five votes were cast in the nominating, and of these Mr. Holmquist received just twenty-four, the vote of every man present except himself. Mr. Saunders and Mr. Hynes got nearly as many.

The call for the nominating posted on the bulletin board of the exchange announced that following the custom of the board of directors, the board recommends for re-election the directors whose terms are expiring.

The call also announced that the outgoing directors were willing to serve another term if the exchange desired.

It was asserted on the floor of the exchange Friday that Messrs. Reed, Bruce and Smith had no desire to be re-elected if any grain man wished their places, and the nominations as taken place are no reflection whatever upon the three present directors. In fact, their services to the exchange are and have been highly appreciated and it is only because of their expressed desire not to stand in the way of active grain men coupled with the desire of the other interests to get representation that the action has occurred as it has.

Stolen Machine Balks on Crooks
Robber-Proof Auto is Recovered by R. B. Held After Thieves Quit in Despair.

Because the engine balked with the thieves just as it had done with the owner, R. B. Held recovered his automobile Friday morning, after it had been stolen and deserted. In response to the tip given by a conductor, Mr. Held and R. C. Brown, a machinist, went to Thirtieth and Bristol streets and found the stolen auto. The machinist was able to persuade the engine into action.

Mr. Held and a friend were out driving the auto Thursday evening, when it balked. Later, when it was stolen from his home, he suggested a hope that the machine would balk on the thief. Apparently it did. Mr. Held lives at 4005 California street.

In an endeavor to save his life the foot was amputated three days ago, but Mr. Casey was not able to withstand the shock of the operation.

He has lived in Omaha forty years, his latest residence being at 513 South Eleventh street. The funeral services have not been arranged. Coroner Crosby will hold an inquest Monday.

BURGESS ACTS ON DAN BUTLER'S BALLOT JOKE
City Clerk Had Remarkable He'd Use Voting Machines and School Board Man Writes.

To assure the Board of Education that City Clerk Dan Butler will not set himself up as a discretionary official and refuse to carry out the board's wishes in having its election by special ballot, Secretary Burgess has sent him an official communication. The purposes of the ballot and the matters upon which votes are to be cast are set forth in the letter and the date of November 4 is set as the last day upon which the secretary can receive the ballots in time to get them to the polling places. City Clerk Butler has been a member of the party favoring voting machines and he made a few half jocular remarks to the effect that if the county clerk had any discretion he had the same and would use the machines in spite of what the board desired. Mr. Burgess wished to give

All Await the Bishop's Return
Successor to the Dean is Named by the Bishop with the Concurrence of the Vestry.

Bishop Arthur Williams will return to Omaha Sunday morning from the general convention of the Episcopal church, bringing with him Bishop Robinson of Nevada, who will conduct the services at Trinity cathedral that morning.

Bishop-elect Beecher continued Friday to be the showered with telegrams of congratulation. The dean has not yet sent his acceptance and may not until Bishop Williams is home. Regarding his successor as dean of Trinity nothing is settled.

"It is all so much of a surprise to us," said Henry W. Yates, who is senior warden of Trinity, "that the matter of a new dean is still far from our minds. While we cannot criticize Dean Beecher, still we can't help feeling sorry that he should be leaving us just at this time. It is a surprise all around."

When the dealership becomes vacant, Bishop Williams will nominate a new man and the vestry will then act on the nomination. Concurrence in an Episcopal nomination does not always occur. After Dean Fay died, Trinity was a year and one-half without a dean.

"I walked on crutches for eight years," says Mr. Hemis, "but I find that by believing in my own ability to get well I have been able to discard them."
