(From style and Fashion, New York.) "Beautiful, glossy and lustrous hair is within the reach of every woman who will only try," said Mme. LeClair, the French beauty specialist, today. "By trying I mean she must use intelligence as well as be willing to put forth the physical effort required. If your hair is dull, brittle, dry and streaked, it means that you are not taking intelligent care of it. "Stop your scrubbing, rubbing and rinsing. Soap and water shampoos only give you a headache, keep you indoors the better part of a day, and expose you to catching cold. "Every woman who wants abundant, lustrous hair should use a dry shampoo. Mix four ounces of powdered orris root with four ounces of therax. Sprinkle about a tablespoonful of this mixture upon the head, then brush the powder thoroughly through the hair. "This cleanses the scalp and hair and gives the hair a beautiful glossy luster in addition to making it light and fluffy. Therax encourages the growth of hair." (Adv.)

Wives May Now Check Husbands While Shopping

Brandeis Store Has Fetching Method of Preserving Husbands Intact During Shopping. Listen, husbands young and old: You may check your husbands while you shop. That you will be sure of getting him back when you have looked at all the new Paris models, matched your new rolls with appropriate ribbon, looked over the latest fashions in corset covers and lingerie waists and spent most enjoyable hours at the jewelry counter. Hubby will now wait patiently instead of champing his bit, so to speak, like a restive steed. For he will be spending all this time in the men's lounging and smoking apartment of the Brandeis Department store. No more will he accompany his little wife through the whole store wearing the pained expression of an early Christian martyr or a candidate for office who has been caught with the goods. The "check your husbands" scheme has already been instituted in the Brandeis store and has met with instant enthusiasm. Now and then a not very pretty woman has been a trifle timid about the proposition. "I am so unlucky about losing things, and what if I lose my check? Why, that odious Mrs. Stiffins might pick it up and go and claim John. And I know she is always making sheep's eyes at him, the cat!" But there is another side to the shield. Another woman said: "I think my husband safer in the smoking room than he would be leaning over the counter for hours and flirting with a pretty shop girl."

Crawford Comes Back at I. J. Dunn

Makes Written Reply to Interview of Assistant City Attorney on Garbage Case. Police Judge Crawford gave out a written reply Tuesday morning to Assistant City Attorney Dunn, who declared in an interview Monday that the police court magistrate "has absolutely no right or authority to set himself up as a court and decide upon questions of constitutional law." The argument between the assistant city attorney and Judge Crawford arose over the latter's discharging G. H. Marshall Saturday morning when arraigned in police court charged with hauling garbage without a license. Judge Crawford replied: "One of the most trying features of judicial position in Douglas county (and, indeed, our supreme court, has been similarly tried) is the periodical outbreak of I. J. Dunn of the city attorney's office. And when judicial duty requires criticism of ordinances prepared by Mr. Dunn, the situation becomes almost perilous. As an instance, this blow out on the occasion of the discharge in police court of one Marshall for hauling garbage without a license. "Mr. Dunn's garbage ordinance is defective in that it nowhere declares that hauling garbage without a license shall constitute an offense. True, the wise purpose of the council as expressed in the ordinance is to constitute garbage hauling a monopoly in the hands of persons holding a contract or license from the city. And, of course, the plain implication is that no other person is permitted to engage in the business. "But a penal offense cannot be constituted by implication. That can only be done by the plain, unequivocal 'thou shalt not.' And there is no such provision in this ordinance. "Mr. Dunn need not prepare either to mandamus or impeach me. I will not refuse to act on any complaint which he may have filed by the city prosecutor, but I apprehend he will have further difficulty in inducing Judge Dickinson to file further complaints for hauling garbage because that gentleman full agrees with the decision in the Marshall case. "Now that Mr. Dunn has had his little blow out, he will set about to amend his ordinance, and I suggest to him that Judge Dickinson can likewise suggest about ten words that will remedy the present defect, at least."

BOYLE LIKES THE TRAMWAYS

Is a Street Railway Magnate in City of Manchester, England. NOTES THE GROWTH OF OMAHA Delivered Message from Ireland to His Countrymen Last Night at Creighton Institute—Met Many People. "D. Boyle, Ireland," that is the way the Honorable Daniel Boyle, North Mayo member of Parliament signs his name—was up bright and early Tuesday morning. Shortly after breakfast in the Henshaw cafe, Omaha's distinguished Irish visitor strolled out in front of the hotel and looked up and down Farnam street. His attention seem to be directed especially to the street cars. "You evidently have an excellent tramway system here," he remarked. It is only natural that Mr. Boyle should focus his eye on street cars—tramways is the word he uses—because he has long been identified with the street railway system of Manchester, England. No monople and gold headed case for this sturdy Irishman. No affectation of speech. No rose garden on his lapel. He is an Irish patriot first. After that he is a busy business man. See him on the street in railway coach and you would never guess that he is entitled to affix "M. P." to his signature. He dresses well, but not flamboyantly, and there is total lack of the sartorial peacekeeping which might be expected of a man who sits in Parliament. After an early morning saunter in the vicinity of his hotel, Mr. Boyle returned to his room and received several Irish-American citizens of Omaha who called from time to time.

Mayor Tucker of Florence, Neb. and Attorney Julius Cooley, who happened to be present, signed the marriage certificate as witnesses. The crowd around the couple all sorts of happy years as they departed.

Soldier Minus Arm Cheerful

James Sullivan, Who Was Hurt by Aeroplane Propeller, Hopes to Be One-Armed Aviator. With his right arm amputated at the elbow, Private James Sullivan, who was injured while working on the M. R. Cole aeroplane at Courtland Beach Sunday, declares he will again try to take up flying machine work. The soldier is progressing nicely after his agonizing ordeal, and, though minus an arm, is cheerful. "I've got the chance," he said. "I'm liable to be the only one-armed aviator in the business." Sullivan was merely assisting when his arm was mangled by the propeller blades. He says he hopes now to some day be a real aviator. Following the accident the soldier was taken to the Fort Omaha hospital and his arm was amputated. He has sustained no other injuries. Inventor Cole desisted from further experiments for the time being as the result of the accident.

FALLEN DICE GIVE CLUE TO THIRD STORY GAME

Plain Clothes Men Find Negroes Grouping for Dice that Fell from Window and Make Hit. As the result of the most extraordinary clue ever heard of in Omaha, Detectives Mitchell and Sullivan raided a crap game on the third floor of 123 Douglas street, and arrested thirty colored gamblers Monday night. The detectives were walking along the street when they became suddenly attracted to the scene of several negroes grouping on hands and knees on the sidewalk. It quickly developed that the colored men were looking for two lost dice. Upon finding the little cubes near the curb, several uttered a loud exclamation. The numbers uppermost on the dice combined to form that of seven. One of the gamblers so overcome with astonishment over the discovery, freely explained to the onlooking plain clothes men that a gambler had accidentally bounced the cubes off the gaming table through an open window to the street below. Those involved in the turn of the dice agreed to abide by what the dice read on the street. The detectives quickly raided the room and took its occupants. The men were dismissed in police court.
