Ar. New York City 5:30 p. m.

OTHER "LIMITED" TRAINS between Chicago and New York over the Pennsylvania Lines also have new steel equipment, which insures additional comfort, for the heavy cars ride more easily.

They are practically indestructible and have heavy steel beams extending their entire length, making them non-collapsible. Upper berths are equipped with electric reading lamps, and numerous other special features for the comfort and enjoyment of passengers are prominent in the new equipment.

When the Pennsylvania Station in New York City is Formally Opened November 27, 1910

all New York trains over Pennsylvania Lines will run into it and will consist of steel equipment exclusively, including heavy electric locomotives (no smoke nor steam) which will take the trains through the tubes under the Hudson River to the new station in that city's busiest spot, only one block from Broadway.
