VAULTS REVEAL HISTORY

Story of the Early Financial Dealings of the State Are Shown by Records Kept in Ancient Safe.

The Omaha National bank, which will open for business tomorrow morning in its handsome new home, carried with it yesterday other treasures than gold and silver and securities of various sorts.

These books and ledgers are the records of the first Nebraska bank, the State Bank of Nebraska, which was founded in territorial days, the date being 1866.

Bank's Growth Organic

The State Bank of Nebraska is related in an historical way to the Omaha National because Joseph H. Millard and others in the bank which went out of business long ago, have been identified with the Omaha National.

The State Bank of Nebraska was the first Nebraska bank. B. F. Allen was its president, and the name of Mr. Allen will awaken many memories in western banking circles.

At this time Joseph H. Millard conducted a land business, with his desk in the State bank, and he and David Moffat, a teller in the bank, bunked together on a shakedown in the bank room when night had come.

In these years before 1866 one can find an entry which shows that Augustus Kountze then had a princely fortune of $100,000. Mr. Millard is discovered to have had on deposit March 2, 1866, the sum of $2,000.

Other Original Stockholders. Other original stockholders were these: Smith B. Caldwell, who was the father of Victor Caldwell, vice president of the United States National J. J. Brown, father of Randall A. Brown; A. J. Simpson, General Greville M. Dodge, James H. Burdick, William Wallace and Charles H. Brown.

More Old Records. Besides the old bank records told of the Omaha National also has the books of the Central National bank, which was organized in an off-shoot of first National stockholders, the president being John McCormick and the cashier J. M. Watson.

First Quarterly Report. The first quarterly report of the Omaha National is still another record. This shows resources as follows: Loans and discounts, $4,242.50; United States bonds, for circulation, 239,927.

RESOURCES. Loans and discounts, $4,242.50; United States bonds, for circulation, 239,927; Stocks and bonds, 57,514; Vaults, furniture and fixtures, 100,000; United States bonds for deposit, 46,237.

LIABILITIES. Capital, $1,000,000; Surplus fund, 200,000; Undivided profits, 353,698.

The Present Officers. Besides Joseph H. Millard and William Wallace, whose connections with the bank have been from its inception, the other officers include another vice president, W. H. Buehler. Mr. Buehler has been with the Omaha National five years.

The directors of the bank, besides the president, vice presidents and cashier, are these well known Omaha capitalists and business men: K. C. Barton, J. E. Baum, Charles H. Brown, Isaac W. Chapman, E. A. Conroy, Louis C. Nash and Arthur C. Smith.

A Bachelor's Reflections. The funniest joke sounds flat when a man you hate tells it. The man of the house has to have the bathroom first, even if he's going to use it last.

LIABILITIES. Capital, $1,000,000; Surplus fund, 200,000; Undivided profits, 353,698.

Cornhuskers' Club at University of Michigan

NEBRASKA STUDENTS AT SCHOOL AT ANN ARBOR.

To the average Omahian a tiny piece of gold molded into the semblance of an ear of corn and bearing upon its face the letter "M" with a "C" on either side of it would convey but little meaning.

May Have Nebraska Club House. The club was launched so late last year that it was impossible to secure a suitable clubhouse for the present year.

The good of the university was by no means in the background in the mind of the club's founder, and its second object was to boost the University of Michigan in Nebraska and to attempt to turn the faces of more young Nebraskans Ann Arborward.

club, and it is now a matter of considerable discussion as to whether the club, hitherto exclusively masculine, will admit these "co-eds" to its membership.

Among the faculty men who have lent their support to the club are Victor R. McLucas, who has only this year given up his law practice in Omaha to accept an assistant professorship in the law department; Dean T. Smith, professor of surgery in the Homeopathic college and formerly connected with the University of Nebraska; Arthur S. Pearce, instructor in zoology, formerly of Omaha High school, and Walter B. Pillsbury, director of the psychological laboratory.

The list of members—and it includes the names of many of the men who are doing most for the success of the various activities which go to make up the life of the great university—follows: C. J. Abbott, Hyannis; G. H. Barnes, Omaha; David Brodkey, Omaha; Carl Bumstead, Lincoln; S. C. Buresh, Omaha; W. L. Campbell, Belden; J. W. Chapman, Kearney; R. M. Crossman, Omaha; C. S. Pointed Paragraphs. The race for wealth ends at the cemetery. Occasionally a man breaks loose and gets light. Many a hot time has been started by a cold bottle. Some people try to substitute a pleasure smile for honesty. Work is about the best rest cure that has yet been discovered. It's about time to count up the things you have to be thankful for. Make a noise like ready money and your friends will not forsake you. Fatalities are persons who couldn't find happiness with a fine tooth comb. A brave man never gets a chance to prove it, but is just as well satisfied. It's the natural bravery of a widow that makes her want to take another chance. Something should be done to prevent hens from laying so many cold-storage eggs. More people would take chances if they could see how long it takes them to turn out right.—Chicago News.

DO YOU DRINK?

The Blackstone Three-Day Cure Is the Treatment Without Bad After Effects—Costs Nothing in Comparison to Others—Satisfaction or No Pay.

I know that it is practically useless for me to tell men I can cure their appetites and craving for liquor in three days—useless because the average drinking man does not wish to be cured. Alcohol has weakened the will of most drinkers that they do not realize the danger they are in. But I can talk to the wives, mothers, fathers, relatives, friends and employees of men who are wasting their lives and impoverishing themselves and families through drink.

I invite everyone interested in the cure of a drunkard to call upon or write to me that I may give them full particulars of the Blackstone Cure, which is the latest and most improved treatment for alcoholism, curing any case in three days. It is not now necessary to confine your patient in an institution and pay an enormous fee for treatment. The Blackstone Cure is a simple, safe, non-poisonous treatment to be taken in the privacy of the home and costs about ONE-FIFTH as much as institute treatment. It is the most reliable and positive treatment known, and is sold by the Blackstone company under an iron-clad contract to cure in any case or the small fee paid will be immediately refunded.
