BANK IS A MODEL OF BEAUTY

Large Sum of Money Has Been Expended to Make it the Finest Banking Room in the Entire West.

The general public declined to wait until Wednesday to inspect the new quarters of the Omaha National bank, and many be sides those baying business paid a visit Monday morning, when the doors opened for the first time

Visitors of Monday saw what is generally described as "the handsomest banking rooms in the west," and the popular verdict will not be disputed. Enter the building and the first sight which strikes the eye in a great plate glass window at the north end of the central corridor. Through this window one can see part of the bank beyond. The main bank quarters occupy the whole first floor with the exception of the corridor, which is like an entrance hall into an old-fashioned residence, with doors on either side of the ball at the right and left. The main floor is thus a hollow square with a slice out, in the center, and the part of the bank which is seen from the entrance hall through the great window is the connecting link between the right and left wings.

To leave the corridor and enter the bank one passes through gates of solid bronze metal ten feet wide and twelve feet high, each weighing approximately two stons. Turning through the right entrance one finds first a small space within a railing, this being intended for a customers' room where pairons may talk over business matters. Adjoining this is the large officers' space un a raised platform. Officers' and customers' spaces have been provided with solid cast bronze entrance gutes and wainscots in solid panelled mahogany rise to a height of seven and one-half feet. Two consultation rooms open to the east of the officers' space. A discount files room is also located here and all three rosms are finished in mahogany.

Women's Room Piest. Circaestan walnut has been used in findepartment on the left of the main entrunce. Receiving tellers' cages and bookkeepers' deeks take up the remainder of the west side. In the northwest part of the room is a two-story book vault with complete steel fittings. The cash vault stands in the center of the north space, this space being the connecting link referred to above.

Above is a ceiling light, which covers the north court between the wings of the building itself.

The directors' room in the northeast corner is a room of real beauty. The ceiling is paneled and decorated in relief plaster and color, the walls have been tinted a soft warm color and the finishing is entirely of Circassian walnut. Gold leaf decoration on the celling adds a bright note On the east side, too, runs the counter and counter screen, which stratches the whole three sides of the bank. Back of this in the cages on the west side are more clerks and the discount department. The counter and counter screen are made of highly polished Pavonazzo marble of a warm cream tone, with dark veining. A base of Verde antique gives a dark relief.

Polished plate glass fills in the counter screen puncts, the glass having an etched and sand blasted border. The flooring of the whole room is of Napoleon gray mar bie, with border of verde antique and Price of Cranberries

Old Building Remodeled. Visitors will see that the architect, George B. Prinz, has solved a difficult problem in remodeling the lower floor of the old New York lafe building. The entrance cause access to elevators had to be fur- Prospect is that Morsels for Thankscorridor could not be dispensed with benished, but by removing nine stories of solid masonry at the rear the whole floor was converted into one great room, with the one exception in front. Also the celling is none too high, but the decorating has raised this in appearance several feet.

The plaster work in the ceiling of the main room will attract and command universal admiration. The design was by Mr. Prinz, the material was made up by the Chicago Architectural Decorating company and the splendid application of this was done of Anderson Bros. of Omaha. The remodelling of the building has taken three months to complete and has cost $250,000, most of which went into the bank room. Six carloads of marble were used here, two carloads of steel furniture, with fittings; twenty cars were required to ship in the new vaults, three carloads of ornamental plaster were employed, one car of solid bronze for the cages, two carloads of abinet work and one of other furniture then that of steel base and wood finishing. The safety deposit department is located wholesale at 28 to 28 cents a pound.

on the east side of the basement and can stairway from the main floor.

twenty tons, the hinges alone weighing of Kenner, La., just now. two tons. But door and hinges are so nicely adjusted that one person can swing Big Programs to Be it without effort. The cash and safety deposit vaults are the last word in vault construction and are lined top, bottom and sides with two and a half feet of chrome and bessemer steel.
