OMAHAN MAKES GOOD ON FARM

W. V. Waller, Former Merchant, Tells of Success.

OTHER CITY MEN SUCCESSFUL Irrigated Land in Montana Draws

Doctors, Lawyers and Other Professional Men-Big Crops Crown Efforts of All.

The "back to the farm" movement is not confined wholly to those who were lured from the open country by the fascination of the city. The statistician of the reclamation service at Washington, D. C., is receiving many encouraging reports from city bred people of all professions who have ventured into the west and made good. On the Huntley irrigation project in Montans there are today engineers, doctors, monufacturers, merchants, lawyers and other professional mon who have taken up government farms and whose crop yields average with those who have had long experience as agriculturists. In this connec ion a letter recently received from M. V Waller, formerly a merchant of Omaha ts especially interesting. Mr. Waller, whose address is Ballantine, Mont., writes as follows:

I came to the Huntley project from Omaha Neb, my business there being that of merchant. I have found that a knowl-edge of farming is not assential to success. edge of farming is not essential to success, and that a city man can succeed if he will make the proper effort. I brought with me a capital of about $4.000. My first impression of the country was very good and I have had no reason to change my mind.

Small Cost to Begin. It cost me about 25 per acre to get the land ready for a crop, the labor being about twice that required in humid countries, but the results are twice as good. One cannot fail to raise good and abundant crops if properly handled.

I have found the educational, religious and social conditions here to be equally as good as those in my former home. We have excellent graded, district schools.

I believe that when this country is more have excellent graded, district schools.

I believe that when this country is more fully settled it will be the finest agricultural district in the west. I believe a new-comor here should have a capital of at least $1,500 to take up a forty-acre farm.

Outs and alfalfa have been my most profilable crops. Alfalfa one year old yielded seven tons per acre. Land sowed in alfalfa and outs together yielded forty bushels of outs per acre and one and one-half tons per acre of alfalfa.

I think the average value of the good lands on the project, when properly tilled is $200 per acre.

The farmers have not yet made any effort toward co-operation in the growing of special crops or organizing for the selling of produce.

The roads are very good for a new country, but we need to do more work on some of them to put them in first class condi-

Pleased With Investment. I am well pleased in every way with my investment here. I have my irrigation ditches so laid out that the work of irrigating is very small. I have never had any trouble at all about getting all the water needed for irrigation at all times. I do not hesitate to urge anyone who is seeking for irrigated lands to come to this project, as I don't believe one can find anything better eigenwhere. thing better elsewhere.

The Huntley project is loosted in south eastern Montana on the Burlington and Northern Pacific railroads. Its irrigation system is one of the finest in the world and the water supply is ample and never failing. At the present time there are 165 farms awaiting settlement, none of which are more than one and one-half miles from a shipping point. The land and water right are only $34 an acre, with ten years in which to pay for it.

Prize Monk Makes Name for Himself

Bedivere Imitates Flower When Deprived of Other Means of Practicing His Art.

Hedivers, the prize monkey of the Omaha park zoo, has again distinguished himself. Bedivere is, as it were, a child of fortunea fondling. He was left in the green house at Hanseom park one stormy March night when the thunder cracked and the lightning flashed in a true melodramatic fashion. None knew whence he came nor why. Nevertheless he was taken in and adopted into the Riverview family.

Cold weather has made his cage at the noo rather chilly; and to make him comfortable he was put in the hot house at Hanscom park.

Bedivere is a genius at the most real of all simian accomplishments-imitation. He can imitate himself so closely that few people can tell the difference.

The gardener noticed for several days that he moped about the bot house and it was generally agreed that since there were no other animals around and few human visitors he had nothing to imitate and therefore nothing to do. They were all very sorry for him, but what could they do? Belivere solved his own dilemma. He was found a few days ago standing solemnly on his head in a bed of chrysanthemums. His beady black eyes were closed and his head was almost buried in the damp loam. But clasped tightly in his tail swaying quiety back and forth was a chrysanthemum blossom. He was imitating the flowers and was happy again.

Now he varies his horticultural activities somewhat, but he never falls to spend a part of his day, at least, swaying some blossom in an imaginary breeze, very much satisfied because he is of some use in the

Parsons, Battle Creek, Mich., illustrates "I have been aflicted with a sev re car; of kidney and bladder trouble, for which I found no relief until I used Foley Eldney Pills. These cured me entirely of all my ailments. I was troubled with backaches and severe shooting pains with annoying urbary irr gularities. The steady use of Foley Kidney Pills rid me entirely of all my former troubles. They have my highest recommendations." Sold by all druggista
