on our first excursion to Adeline plantation. From the crowd promised for our next trip, we feel confident that we will self doubt that number of farms. Why not? The agricultural and horticultural conditions are perfect. The same is true of the climatic conditions, and climate in Louisiana means more than comfort

IT MEANS CHEAP LIVING The first killing frost in 1906 was on December 20th, and the last was on February 17th, 1919, making less than sixty days of winter! Compare that with the long cold winters of Nebraska or Iowa, where fires are necessary at least six months in the year. The matter of clothing in Louisiana is greatly simplified by the mild winter weather.

NEARNESS TO MARKET Many people have overlooked the fact that southern Louisiana is the closest garden to the large cities of the north, only twenty-five hours from Chicago to New Orleans. Then there are the other large cities, almost as convenient, Omaha. St. Joe. Kansas City, St. Louis, to the west and the Ohio and Indiana cities to the east. The cost of transportation is greatly simplified when produce can be shipped by boat, as it is possible to do on Adeline plantation.

There is almost no limit to the crops that can be grown, either of grains, or vegetables or frufts, and one can live like a prince, and the same energy expended in the south that is necessary in the north will bring twice the return. Why not plan to go with us on our
