Once inside the sacred portals of the upper house, the recently appointed senator from lows was taken in charge by his colleague, Senater Cummins, who introduced him to the "wheel horses" of republicanism as well as democracy. The greeting between Lafayette Young and Seantor Aldrich was a sight for the gods, for Aldrich evidently was jubilant over meeting anybody who succeeded to the seat of the late semator from Iowa, Mr. Dolliver, but the senior senator from Iowa ment of district court on Saturday, the bar of this county presented to Judge Church a fine gold headed cane. He was holding his last term after being on the bench for sixteen years. The presentation was preceded by remarks of high enlogy of Judge Church by Hon. J. P. Conner and Jacob Sims of the bar. never showed the white feather. He was there to perform a public duty, even though it might be distasteful to him, in the introduction of his colleague who has been on opposite sides with Mr. Cummins for many years.

The senior senator, however, did not have the opportunity of marching down the aisle with his colleague arm in arm to be presented before the rostrum of the vice president. That painful but necessary duty will come tomorrow in all probability and be-fore the reading of the president's message. He was born in Parls in 1840. The failure of the newly appointed senator from lows to take the eath of office was very early adjournment out of respect to the memories of Senators Dolliver, Daniel, Clay and McEnery, whose deaths were announced with a solemnity such as has never been witnessed in a generation, for the deaths of four senators by a robber in her home at Silver Lake, compressed air to giant storage tanks and during an interim of congress is without Minn. Senator Brown, who has a seat adjoining that of Senator Beveridge, was regaled with stories with "how it happened" from the senior senator from Indiana.

But what filled the minds of few of the staid senators with envy was the manne in which Senator Burkett approached the capitol where for six years he has been a force, particularly in legislation for the state and for the section from which he comes. He came in a seven-passenger auto which he has recently bought to show that he has no deep resentments to the people of Nebrasks for turning him down. Now that he is out of the senate, Sinator Burkett said to Senator Depew today that he proposed to own an automobile, hire a chauffeur and sport a red necktis if he so desired. All of which added to the galety of the opening of congress.

Two events stood out in a marked degree during the session of the house today, the reception given Speaker Cannon and "rebel yell" which struck "Champ" Clark full in the face when he entered the ball of the house shortly after the prayer of the chaptain. The applause which greeted Speaker Cannon, participated in by floor and galleries, gave no evidence of waning popularity. "Uncle Joe," buoyant and sprightly, the youngest man at 75 who ever yielded the gavel as speaker, showed no signs of landslide he had back.

The galleries were gay with color and crowded to suffocation by the wives and friends of members, bringing out in sharp contrast the little dramas of congratulation and commiseration which were going on below, until the speaker's gavel, calling the last session of the Sixty-first session to order, brought a hush while the prayer of the chaplain invoked the divine blessing upon these who constituted the body which limitation of law expires at the hour of 12 o'clock March 6, 1911.

Cement from this plant of the Ogden Portland Cement company, branded with the "beehive," Utah's distinguishing symbol of industry and excellence, is shipped by the carload as far north as Montana and the panhandle of Idaho to distributing agents finding ready sale for the product through some eighty lumber yards.

The headquarters of the company are in Ogden and considerable money is disbursed each month through the local offices. There are sixty men employed and plans are being perfected for a second unit to be added to the factory, which will call for more men and a much larger payroll.
