OMAHA VIADUCT CASE ARGUED

Missouri Pacific Using Every Endeavor to Escape Paying for All of Structure Ordered by Municipality.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 16.—(Special.)—Four of the eleven state institutions have gone beyond their allowance thus far in the biennium, according to figures compiled by State Land Commissioner Cowles...

The final hearing in an injunction brought by the Missouri Pacific Railroad to prevent the city of Omaha from restraining from proceeding according to the provisions of the city ordinance to compel the railroad to build a viaduct across its tracks at Forty-fifth and Dodge streets was in progress this morning before Judge T. C. Munger of the federal court...

The main question in the controversy is whether the mayor has the right to require the railroad company to build a viaduct, at their own expense, of such a character that it can be used by the street railway company to run its heavy cars across.

Would Escape Paying All. The attorneys who are appearing for the city in the hearing contend that the presence of the railroad tracks at this point has made the highway unsafe and that they are under the legal and moral duty to restore a street surface which will be just as safe and which can be used by all the people and for all the classes of traffic...

Costs Less to Marry Than to Pay Court. William Snell and Margaret Merkle United in Hall County When Adams County Falls.

HASTINGS, Neb., Dec. 16.—(Special.)—Failing in their effort to secure a marriage license here, owing to the pendency of a criminal action against the groom, William Snell and Margaret Merkle went to Grand Island, obtained the coveted license from the Hall county judge yesterday and were quickly made husband and wife.

Some weeks ago Snell and Miss Merkle were discovered in Nelson and the former was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Nellis on the charge of enticing the girl away from her home in Hanover township. He was brought back to Hastings and after arraignment the trial was postponed. Early this week Snell applied for a license to wed Miss Merkle, but Judge Burton declined to issue the license while the criminal action was pending...

As the wife will not testify against her husband, it is not likely the case against Snell will be pressed.
