Woman's Work.

Activities of Various Organized Bodies Along the Lines of Undertaking of Concern to Women.

Teacher and parent discussed the problem of the cost of graduation from the high school and discussed it thoroughly at the meeting of the Household Economic department of the Woman's club yesterday afternoon. As a result of the discussion. the department will co-operate with the teachers to arrange for a mass meeting of parents, both fathers and mothers, and teachers, to be held at the Omaha High school some time after the holidays. Furthermore the department pledges itself, through its leader, Mrs. F. J. Burnett. to work for the introduction of a four years' course in domestic science in the high school curriculum. The discussion of the high school expense, and more explicitly graduation expenses, was at the special request of some of the mothers of high school pupils. It was considered from all points of view, that of the high school girl included, for there was present a group of high school girls. Domestic science entered the discussion as a possible though not immediate answer. It was introduced by Miss Neva Turner, teacher of domestic science at the high school. In her talk Miss Turner emphasized the importance of definiteness in planning and urged that a possible way to check ex- in the market place where are kept the from 45 to 90 cents a peck; bananas, 20

Ways to Serve Oysters

CALLOPED oysters should not be a pasty mass. Do not use too soft bread in crumbing them nor too much Hquid. Butter over each layer and a few tablespoonfuls of cream poured in at the last are enough. The shallow earthenware dish that holds not more than two layers of ovsters makes a better scallop than the deep, old-fashloned pudding dish. If more than one panful is needed there can be a second plateful in the oven ready to be slipped into the silver rim.

Individual scallop dishes, or four or five larger oyster shells filled with oysters and covered with bread crumbs and butter, are preferred by

When one has been made a present of a barrel or keg of oysters do not omit the opportunity to give an oyster roast. Invite guests that you know well; also make sure they est oysters. Make almost the entire supper of the bivaive. Grapefruit or buillon can be served first. Have oysters roasted in kitchen and brought in when the shells have opened.

Raw oysters are more palatable on their own shell than on handsome oyster plates. They must be thoroughly chilled, and preferably should rest on a bed of shaved ice.

The lemon with raw oysters should he cut th quarters in the rind. Or in the center of the shell circle have half a lemon with the center partially filled with horseradish. It is more fashionable now to serve oyster cocktails in the shells with a small slender glass of the sauce in the center of each plate. Fried oysters for home use are more delicate when done in bread crumbs than in cracker dust. They should only be dipped once in the egg and crumb, otherwise they are too stiff and crusty. Butter is a better frying medium than deep fat. For creamed oveters do not cook them too long in the mixture or they will be tough. The edges should just shrivel. These can be served in rameskins or pate shells, and they are excellent when creamed in a butter, sait and pepper. When oysters are left over from stews or creamed mixtures they can be chopped and used as salad or croquettes. For the former the eye must be removed, and it is better to do so for any cooking where the whole oyster is not essential.

The bacon that comes ready sliced in boxes is convenient to use for pigs in blankets (oysters wrapped in a slice of bacon) when fried in a chafing dish.

A good filling for pate shells is made from oysters and mushrooms cooked together with a rich white

COASTING

Now that the time for coasting and other winter sports is at hand, we want to speak a word of WARNING, with particular reference to COASTING.

On all streets on which there are street car tracks, and on all hills which cross or terminate on streets having street car tracks, there is a CONSTANT DANGER to those indulging in the exhilarating sport of coasting.

Men and women, as well as boys and girls, have lost their lives, or have been seriously injured by dashing into moving or standing cars on their sleds or travelers.

Why jeopradize your lives by coasting where the hazard is so great, when there are so many places in this city of hills, where this sport may be indulged in with perfect safety?
