$10 per Acre for Fine Kansas Land

I am in Omaha during the land show and am prepared to show plats of fine Kansas land for $10 an acre.

This land is a part of the tract which sells for $40 an acre. It is unimproved. The black dirt is from 5 to 15 feet deep. Pure water may be obtained from 60 to 100 feet. Annual rainfall is from 20 to 25 inches.

This land produces 35 bushels of wheat per acre and more. It produces 500 pounds of broom corn per acre. One crop on this land will pay for the land. This is the section where sick people get well and well people get rich.

Kansas is where independence blossoms and men are their own masters.

Kansas is where renters find homes and clerks safe investments.

I shall be glad to meet every one of you at my booth in the auditorium to tell you of this land and to sell you some of it.

Don't Take Our Word for It—We May Be Prejudiced

No man in the United States is in a position to speak with such authority as to the yield of farm products as is Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, who has charge of the Farmers' Co-Operative Demonstration Work, United States Department of Agriculture. He has over 400 employes under him, and has enlisted more than 40,000 people in farm demonstration work. He is not a southern, but an Iowa man.

He says: "It has been thought till recently that the South would not raise large crops of Indian corn, but a little demonstration has proven that the soils and climate are especially adapted for that purpose, and that larger crops can be raised than in the so-called corn states. Climatic conditions are much more favorable for the corn plant, and as a large portion of the plant is of atmospheric origin, climate is of primary consideration. All that is necessary is to prepare the soil in the best way and use good farm methods, and the South will develop into one of the best corn regions in the United States. We have produced the last year under test from 80 to 150 bushels of corn per acre.

"Along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, and even in the interior, are large tracts of sandy loam land perfectly adapted to truck growing. They have not as yet been more than partially developed, but ultimately they are going to constitute the permanent garden lands of the United States. Single acres have yielded in celery, lettuce and such crops more than $1,000 per acre.

"It is unnecessary to dilate upon these facts. The South has not been understood; neither its soil nor its climate has been appreciated. Lands are far below their value at the present time, and there is no better place in the continent for young, thrifty and vigorous men to start in agriculture than in many of these Southern States."

The above is quoted from an official letter of Dr. Knapp, dated Washington, D. C., February 25, 1910. Corn is only one of two or three crops often grown on the same land the same year in Florida, where our lands are located. If you are from Missouri, and have to be shown, call at our office, 642 Paxton Block.
