Equalisation of Florence did not wait for, has proven very costly to the little village. Judge Day Friday handed down a decision declaring the tax levy of $54,000, made August 30, to pave the streets, void. , The reason given was that the notice of the Board of Equalization was not published for four full weeks, as required by law. The notice was printed in four issues of the Florence Tribune, but the board met just twenty-six days, instead of twenty-eight dafs after the first publication. All proceedings were held good up until the time of the levy of the

By the franchise and statutes the street ear comany is required to pay for paving between the rails and a foot outside, but the court said in view of the fact that the contractor paved that part of the street the city should pay reasonably for the work. By the decision the city of Florence is enjoined from paying the $7,500, donated by the County Commissioners of Douglas county to Florence, to the contractor, under the terms of the contract. "But," says the decision, "by this it is not meant to prevent the contractor from flling a claim with the council based upon the value of the services rendered for paving that part of the street in question.

The case is known on the court docket as Paul against the City of Florence and resuited from a levy made against all of the property in the city for paving Main street one mile and a half long.

The villages of Loundee, Benson and othera have paving matters pending and the decision made today will probably have considerable effect upon how these matters shall be brought about.
