

What Women Are Doing

ILLS which were endorsed at the recent state convention of charities and corrections and which are to be brought before the Nebraska legislature this winter, will be discussed at the open meeting of the Woman's club Monday afternoon. The meeting is in charge of the social science department. Mrs. Draper Smith will preside. The speakers who will tell of the different laws and the social conditions which demand them are Dr. A. W. Clark, Mrs. Harriet Heller, Rabbi Frederick Cohn, Mr. E. B. Gosson, Mr. Louis V. Gule, Miss Ida V. Jontz and Mrs. F. H. Cole.

After the program the social science department will give an informal reception for Mrs. Heller, who is now at Lincoln, but who has been a most active and important member and officer in the department.

Omaha clubwomen who are members of the household economics department of the Woman's club will go to school Thursday morning. They will, in fact, attend the high school and as guests of Miss Neva Turner, domestic science teacher, attend one of the class demonstrations. The department greatly favors the introduction of a four years' course of domestic science into the high school curriculum and feels much admiration for Miss Turner's work there. After the class the clubwomen will be entertained at luncheon in the high school lunch room. Only the members of the department are included in the invitation. The members will meet at the clubrooms in the First Congressional church at 10 o'clock and go to school from there.

The art department of the Omaha Woman's club has arranged for a stereopticon exhibit of the paintings of several of the British artists. The stereopticon review, which is to be given at the public library Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, will include pictures of the paintings by artists from Hogarth to Turner. These paintings have been studied by the club during the first half of this year's program and the leaders who have been in charge of the program will assist by reviewing some of the facts in regard to the paintings shown. Mrs. W. H. Hancock, leader of the department, will be in charge of the afternoon.

Mrs. George B. Darr will have charge of the program at the meeting of the literature department of the Woman's club to be held Wednesday morning. The study of Mark Twain's works will be continued. Mrs. Elwood Anderson will give a paper entitled "The Story of His Debits." Miss Agnes Somers will review "Following the Equator," and Mrs. W. A. Chellis will give a reading.

Appointments has been made of all the chairmen of the standing committees of the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs. In a letter making announcement of the appointments, the president, Mrs. T. J. Gist, states that the committee list will be soon complete and the state year books ready for distribution.

The chairmen for the standing committees of the Nebraska Federation are as follows: Art, Mrs. Nettie Wills Shugart of Lincoln; Library extension, Mrs. H. L. Keefe, Walthill; Civil service reform, Mrs. F. H. Cole, Omaha.

Health, Susan La Flesche Picoté, Walthill; Education, Mrs. Mel Orris, Stanton; Forestry, Mrs. J. M. Ragan, Hastings; Civics, Mrs. B. C. Crosey, Fairbury; Household economics, Mrs. F. J. Burnett, Omaha.

Music, Mrs. John Cattle, Seward; Program, Mrs. L. I. Cowan, Ashland. The special committee chairmen are: Committee to confer with General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Walter Thompson, Lincoln.

Scholarship fund, Mrs. F. H. Cole. Charities and corrections, Mrs. H. W. Field, Lincoln. Executive and president, Mrs. T. J. Gist, Falls City.

Exhibition of the work done in and by the classes in the different departments of the Young Women's Christian association will be made at the building Friday. This day, officially known as "open day in educational department," is to give the public an idea of the work done in the classes, to show those not already in classes what it is possible for them to study. The hours of the exhibit, which is open to every one, are from 3 to 6:30 and from 7:30 to 10 o'clock.

Refreshments will be served by the social committee. In the domestic science department visitors will be given an opportunity to taste cookies made by the students.

Important Prescription For Stomach Troubles

This comes from reliable medical authority as being one of the most remarkable prescriptions ever formulated. It is substantiated by the results shown by its widespread use in hospital work and private practice. It is said to give immediate relief for distress after eating, belching, sour stomach, dizziness and headaches, and if used for sufficient time will eradicate worst dyspepsia. Two ounces essence of Peppin, three ounces syrup of ginger, one ounce Cascadian compound, mix thoroughly and add one teaspoonful after each meal and at bed time. Cascadian always comes put in one-ounce sealed packages. Any druggist should have it in stock by this time or he will quickly get it from his wholesale house. Far from being a habit like the Peppin and the Ginger they let him stand about an hour before adding the Cascadian. It will be more convenient to get the ingredients from the druggist and mix them at home. Those who have tried this are enthusiastic over its prompt and efficient action.—Adv.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—Aside from the round of entertainments and receptions that have marked the last week in society in Washington, there has been much interest in a number of announcements of engagements of prominent couples which have been followed by pre-nuptial dinners and social functions of a similar nature.

Much interest has been manifested here in the announcement coming from Pittsburg, Pa., of the engagement of Miss Jean Stone, daughter of ex-Governor and Mrs. William A. Stone, to William J. Crumpton. Both are well known in Washington. Miss Stone, after graduation from a private school in New York, traveled and studied in Europe. Mr. Crumpton is a consulting engineer and a graduate of the University of Wisconsin. The wedding will be an event of the early spring and the couple will make their home at Evanston, Ill.

The wedding of Miss Lucy Wilson Edmonston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sherwood Edmonston of Georgetown, to Edward J. Farrell of Chicago and Indianapolis, will take place about the middle of February. The date for the marriage of Miss Gladys Glover to Robert Armstrong Livingston of New York has not been announced. Miss Glover was born in Washington during the term in congress of her father, Hon. John M. Glover, and the announcement of the engagement is therefore of much interest to society in the capital city.

Another engagement is that of Mrs. Beatrice Kelly of Kansas City to Lieutenant George Goodrich of the Thirtieth infantry. Mrs. Kelly is the house guest of G. C. Nichols at the Presidio in California. The wedding will be an event of the early summer.

One of the society events of the week was the marriage on Tuesday of Miss Olga Converse, daughter of the late Rear Admiral George A. Converse, to August Derby of Boston.

Henry White, former ambassador to France and Mrs. White will soon occupy their palatial home on Meridian Hill, which is now nearing completion. The home will be one of the most magnificent in that section of the city and will doubtless be the scene of many social functions of the future. Mr. and Mrs. White recently returned from Paris, where Mrs. White was ill during part of the winter.

Mrs. Joseph Blount Chesire, wife of the bishop of North Carolina, who has been the guest of her father, Rev. Walter A. Mitchell, received informally with her sisters Tuesday.

Miss Helen Taft, who has been one of the most popular debutantes of the White House, has been the center of much social attention during the last part of the month and a number of social functions to be given in her honor during February are announced. Mr. and Mrs. Preston Gibson will entertain in honor of Miss Taft Febmer's intention, as has been announced, to take a residence on the gulf coast of Florida, where she spent the autumn, only returning to her Chicago home for a holiday visit and to receive at the charity ball.

CORONATION RULES OF QUEEN

Elaborate Preparations for the Crowning Event in the British Royalty.

The design for the coronation dress is not finally settled, reports the London Times. Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, is believed to be making the drawing for the embroideries, and the Royal School of Art Needlework will carry them out. There is reason to believe that Queen Mary will wear the train worn by Queen Alexandra in 1902, as the king will wear the coronation robe worn by King Edward VII. Queen Alexandra's train is a glorious ruby-red velvet affair, covered with a mass of gold embroidery, the effect being lightened by the alternate use of glittering and dull gold. Crowns, roses and thistles are on it, and no child's dream of a royal robe was ever more worthy of a queen. Queen Mary has been inspired by artistic feeling in her choice of various state dresses, for they are all to be simple in line, cut, princess shape, and for the most part, with draped bodices; we need not say also that they are without tied in, or indeed, very narrow skirts. The gown for the opening of Parliament will be predominatingly black.

The train which we have reason to believe will be worn by the queen, and which, as stated above, was worn by Queen Alexandra at her coronation, is eighteen feet in length and about five feet in width, lined throughout with miniver. It has a cape from the shoulders about eighteen inches deep of the same fur, and is bordered all round with an edging of ermine three inches wide. The front part, with draped bodices, will be lined with ermine and have imperial crowns embroidered partly in glittering plate gold and partly in Chinese gold, the crosses and fleurs-de-lis in what is known as puri, the balls along the arches of the crowns being made of gold studs and the bases of sparkling silver threads. These crowns are set sixteen inches apart every way and are thirty in number.

The whole train is surrounded by a very rich golden border divided into the three parts between the first part of which and the ermine border is a strip of the velvet showing and making a fine contrast to the fur and the gold. The first part is of cloth of gold with a running pattern of bright pale gold on a rich, mellow tint, and on this are applied hundreds of the English rose in very thick embroidery. The next part is of the velvet, and on it is wrought a pattern formed of branches of oak leaves and acorns held together alternately by the crosses and fleurs-de-lis of the imperial crown. This border is so finely worked as to have the appearance of being a gold jewel; the leaves are of hollow gold, the stems of Chinese, the acorns of thick bullion, their cups of gold beads sewed closely together, and the fleurs-de-lis and crosses of many different sorts of gold, the latter set off with jewels of gold.

The third part of the border is of cloth of gold woven on a ruby purple ground, the leaves of oak leaves among stems supporting alternate English roses and fleurs-de-lis, embroidered as in the former instances. The whole border is fifteen inches wide. At the end of the train is a very rich piece of embroidery a yard and a half in length, filling up the whole sweep of the train. This is meant to represent the growth of the British kingdom, by means of a coronation rose tree ascending through the crown of the ancient kings of England and spreading upward into strong branches bearing double flowers, the center portion being of gold and the inner of silver petals and leaves arched with stout thorns. As the tree grows upward the thistle and shamrock are grafted on to it, and at last it envelops the star of the Indian empire and is surmounted by the lowest of the imperial crowns which cover the rest of the train. Among the roots of the tree sprout the fleurs-de-lis of France.

The great stems of this piece are embroidered in plate gold, Chinese and other kinds, with the thorns of a very sparkling gold thread; the leaves of the rose and the shamrock are of puri, the leaves of the thistle of bullion with great veins of plate, and the flowers are very beautifully shaded with purple silk. The star of India is of silver with golden rays, whose brilliance is expressed by golden studs gradually diminishing in size of mere points of gold.

KANSAS TICKLED WITH A PLUG

Oppressive Dignity of Judicial Initiation is Banished by a "Chaw."

The announcement that Judge Walter Sanborn of the United States circuit court will sit with Judge Pollock in the federal court in Kansas City brings with it the information that it is the first time a circuit judge has occupied the bench in Kansas City in ten years. The incident will recall to Kansas lawyers the visit of the late Judge Thayer of the circuit court to Wichita on a similar mission ten or twelve years ago. The fact that a circuit judge will to occupy the bench with Judge Hook, who was then district judge for Kansas, had brought a courtroom full of lawyers in attendance. Everybody about the federal building, together with all the court officers, from United States marshal to the janitors had been notified to make a "smart appearance" for the occasion. There was all the dignity about the Wichita courtroom that morning that could be "spread on" with the paraphernalia and red tape provided for common courts.

When Judge Thayer and Judge Hook entered, the lawyers stood up and with bowed heads heard the marshal open court and there was reverence of an extraordinary degree in the response to the closing invocation: "And may God save this honorable court." The audience waited to hear how a circuit judge would break the silence. It was not kept in suspense very long. "Have any of the brethren of the bar a plug of tobacco handy?" asked Judge Thayer. "I find that I have come away without any chewing tobacco. Thank you," said, as one of the attorneys handed him a "plug" and he cut off a good, big "chew." "Now let the court proceed." That was all that was necessary. Judge Thayer had won a place in Kansas—Kansas City Times.
