

Political and Social News by Cable and Correspondence from the Old World

LLOYD GEORGE'S STATE INSURANCE

Proposed Plan Will Cover Sickness and Invalidity in a Large Class. DRAFT READY FOR PARLIAMENT Any Person Receiving Less Than Taxable Income is Eligible.

MINIMUM FIVE SHILLINGS A WEEK

Insurance Will Cover the Working Years of Life. FUNDS FROM THREE SOURCES Lord Rosebery in the Role of Confraternal Charity Howler Who Sees Militant Socialism Behind Budget.

BY PAUL LAMBERT. LONDON, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—The scheme of state insurance for sickness and invalidity, which has been drafted by the chancellor of the exchequer, has been launched this session. The main outlines of the scheme as drafted are as follows:—

Compulsory insurance for sickness and invalidity for the whole of the working population of the country whose incomes are below the income tax level of £50 a year. The minimum insurance is to be 5s a week, this to be the limit of the state compulsory insurance. The minimum of 5s per week being a purely voluntary insurance by the member with the friendly societies. The minimum insurance of 5s a week will be guaranteed by the state.

The period which the state insurance will cover will be the working years of life between 16 and 70. The contribution needed to provide a sickness insurance of 5s a week will be calculated by the government actuaries, and the cost will be met one-half by the workmen insurer and the remaining half in equal proportions by the employer and the state. The proposed scheme of insurance, being compulsory and universal in its application so far as the whole of the working population is concerned, will accept the risks of all lives, good and bad.

The scheme makes provision for the establishment of a central administrative council composed of representatives of the government, the friendly societies and employers of labor to deal with all questions which arise under the working of the scheme. Grant in India. The inquiry made by the privy council on appeal from the supreme court of Burma, has developed the fact that graft in the shape of padded payrolls in the Khedive's department (elephant hunting) is rampant, in fact, as bad as it is in the British (Indian) army. Three of the principal officers who were convicted appeared. The government alleged that the total was only $25,000 in a certain expedition. The defendants, it was alleged, had covered up the accounts so as to make it appear 240 men had taken part. The defendants appealed to the privy council, which has decided against the grafters.

The government has been advised that there is a crookedness on a large scale in other Indian bureaus and departments and it is intimated that investigators are at work in them to learn the extent of the stealing. Abyssinia Gets Arms. England is much concerned over the report that 20,000 stand of arms and some 6,000,000 cartridges, part of Japan's spoils of war taken at Port Arthur, have been sold to Abyssinia. The price paid is not stated, but the seller states that he has secured the arms for less than the market value. A good deal more will be heard of this matter, as the British government has been making anxious inquiry with a view of finding out why the arms and ammunition were bought.

Patrolling Persian Gulf. British warships have been patrolling the waters at the entrance of the Persian gulf for more than a year to prevent illicit trade in rifles on the northwest frontier of India. Captures have been made, sometimes after severe conflicts. An encounter at Dibal, near Lingal, resulted in the loss of four British seamen killed and nine wounded. Rosebery a Calamity Howler. Lord Rosebery has become a confirmed "calamity howler." With bloodshot eyes, haggard face and screaming voice, he predicts the ruin of the empire as the result of the budget. He sees in the Lloyd George budget the forces of socialism, the wreckers of the home, the destruction of Christianity, in a word the end of all things. And, like Burke, Lord Rosebery stands alone. His monomania has cost him not only his party, but his friends. Those who cling to him to the last are now disgusted at his attempt to pose as an impartial statesman, while in reality he is in sympathy with the Tories, and would prefer that he would play the man and go straight over. "What a humiliating position for the brilliant Lord Rosebery, once the darling of liberalism, the monarch king of Scotland, to be reduced to the role of a political Cinderella, whose chosen task it is to do and dry scullery work of the Tory party," is the comment concerning him made by one of his former staunchest supporters.

Roman Church Gains Converts. Five Episcopalians clergymen and fifty members of their churches at Brighton recently joined the Roman Catholic church and were confirmed publicly by the bishop of Southwark. The Rev. David Rhye-Morgan, a prominent Welsh parson, was recently received in the Roman Catholic church at Franciscan college, Oxford, England. The clergymen are in Rome studying for the priesthood. In connection with the recent sale of what is known as the Peddler's Acre in Lambeth, and the payment of the proceeds to a body of trustees, there is stated to be a probability of litigation over the question of whether the money received rightly belongs to the local authority or to the church authorities. The sum at stake is about $200,000. The estate, on acre only, when bequeathed by a man said to have been a peddler in the fifteenth century was not of any great value. The land had a frontage on the Thames, and was acquired by the county council. The generally accepted theory that the poor peddler bequeathed the land to the church in recognition of the kindness he had received and also upon the condition that he was permitted to bury his faithful dog in the churchyard.

PLAGUE IS NOW STAMPED OUT

Travelers Again Taking to Sightseeing in Italy. POPE OBLIGES OLD PARISHIONERS Talented Painter Who Took Up the Life of a Monk is Devoting His Life to Work in Old Churches.

ROME, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—The plague which recently swept over the country is now well under control. In fact it has been all but stamped out. There is an isolated case of cholera here and there. Travelers who have been visiting the country a wide berth are coming here. Pope Kind in Old Palaces. For the first time since his election, Pope Pius exercised the office of confessor recently. Three old people from his native town of Biase were the penitents. Etina Outlet Again. The eruption of Mount Etina is now considered over. A slight cloud of smoke rising from the central crater is the only sign of the volcano's activity. Nevertheless, Profs. Raso and Mervelli, are of the opinion that a further and exceedingly violent eruption may be expected shortly.

Murderess is Insane. By order of the president of the Venice court, three mental experts have examined the Countess Tarnowska and they have pronounced her wildly insane. It is understood that she will be removed to an insane asylum at Prof. Bossi. The government recently refused to pardon the murderess. Text of St. Jerome. Father Antonio Sturzo, Benedictine monk, has nearly completed his reproduction of the original texts of St. Jerome, the manuscripts of which are in the Russian imperial library. Mafia Still Active. Another crime has been perpetrated by members of the Mafia organization, Pasquale Vita, the manager of the sulphur mine at Farara, was accused of having betrayed the association. The supreme tribunal of the Mafia condemned him to death. Vita, whilst proceeding to the mine, was attacked and killed by six masked men, who fired fourteen shots at their victim at point-blank range. Pina Chimes Ring. The order which prohibited the ringing of the chimes in the leaning tower at Pina has been revoked, there being no risk in the ringing. Father Alfani, the noted theologian, has concluded experiments at the tower with tremendous instruments of his own invention which measured the vibrations caused by the ringing of the bells in the tower. Father Alfani ascertained that the oscillations were insignificant, even when the bells were rung continuously, and that there was no danger to the tower.

Musical Works for Love. Brother Paolo Mussini, a talented painter, who some years ago suddenly disappeared from his studio, was next heard of as a Franciscan friar painting in fresco the walls of a poor old church. Every now and again the illustrated papers gave reproductions of his pictures or a likeness of himself to the habit of his order. He has written a letter to the newspapers asking for contributions to help him in his work of decoration of an abandoned church. "On the footprints of St. Francis, I go about restoring poor and abandoned churches," he says. The church which Fra Paolo is decorating is the parish church of Quintodecimo, the place being a picturesque village on the banks of the Tronto. He says in his appeal: "A beautiful house of God is a very good omen for the people."

Camorra Trial Deferred. The trial of the Camorra Alfano and his thirty-two comrades in the Camorra charged with the murder of James Cuccolo and his wife, has been postponed to the first week of March. EDINBURGH, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—Scotland is having another attack of the gold fever. The duke of Sutherland's discovery of an abandoned mine, which is likely to be re-opened after an interval of some forty years. There was a great rush during the years 1870-71 to this outlying part of Scotland, when an Australian digger, named Gilchrist, returning to his native country, made the discovery of a nice little trickle of four ounce nugget in one of the upland streams running into the Broira river, and thereafter set to work with considerable success washing out gold from the neighboring "burns" and tributaries. But the present duke's father closed the workings, owing, it is said, to the shooting tenants complaining about "undesirable" roaming over their preserves. Some twenty years later another effort was made, but on this occasion the work was stopped by the advice of geologists, who said that gold was not there in paying quantities; that it was not to be found in the matrix, but only in the washings from the deposits of running streams, and that the origin of even this came from the glaciers of prehistoric times. That opinion was not convincing to many practical diggers with experience, and now that a perfectly fair trial is likely to be given, it will soon be ascertained if gold deposits in payable quantities lie in the Kildonan district.

MOHAMMEDAN CONGRESS FOR LIBERAL EDUCATION

Notable Departure from Political Discussions Marks Sessions at Nagpur. CALCUTTA, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—The dominant note in the Mohammedan congresses concluded at Nagpur has been the attention paid to education and communal improvement rather than to strictly political matters. The resolutions passed favored women's education, improved scientific and technical instruction, universal, free and compulsory primary education, and the creation of a Mohammedan educational fund.

Gold Excitement Aroused in Scotland by Good Prospects

Abandoned Fields on Property of the Duke of Sutherland Are to Be Worked Again. EDINBURGH, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—Scotland is having another attack of the gold fever. The duke of Sutherland's discovery of an abandoned mine, which is likely to be re-opened after an interval of some forty years. There was a great rush during the years 1870-71 to this outlying part of Scotland, when an Australian digger, named Gilchrist, returning to his native country, made the discovery of a nice little trickle of four ounce nugget in one of the upland streams running into the Broira river, and thereafter set to work with considerable success washing out gold from the neighboring "burns" and tributaries. But the present duke's father closed the workings, owing, it is said, to the shooting tenants complaining about "undesirable" roaming over their preserves. Some twenty years later another effort was made, but on this occasion the work was stopped by the advice of geologists, who said that gold was not there in paying quantities; that it was not to be found in the matrix, but only in the washings from the deposits of running streams, and that the origin of even this came from the glaciers of prehistoric times. That opinion was not convincing to many practical diggers with experience, and now that a perfectly fair trial is likely to be given, it will soon be ascertained if gold deposits in payable quantities lie in the Kildonan district.

FIGHT FOR MONEY FULL OF COMEDY

Chauffeur in Berlin Claims Fortune that He Found in His Vehicle. OWNER OF THE CAB WANTS IT Two Cities Also Claim a Share in the "Pickup."

KAISER AGAIN SCORES DIPLOMATS Made Presentation of a Crucifix to a Catholic Prior. SHOCKING STORY OF DEGENERACY Accidental Breaking of a Package in the Mails Brought to Light an Amazing Disregard of Life in a Family.

BY MALCOLM CLARK. BERLIN, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—Two municipalities, including this city, a chauffeur and a taxicab owner, are involved in a struggle for a small fortune which belongs to none of them. The struggle has come comic opera features about it and the story may in time find expression on the stage. Paul Kugelmann, a taxicab man who earns his living here, is wondering whether he is destined to be a capitalist or chauffeur. A year ago he found in his car $4000 in cash and bank notes and jewels worth $3,000 left by a grateful "fare."

Kugelmann handed over the valuables to the police administration. Lost property reverts to the finder if not claimed within a year. The chauffeur was just about to take possession when the owner of the taxicab intervened with the contention that the valuables belonged to him and not to the chauffeur. Then the city put in a demand for $400, as the discovery took place within its boundaries. The neighboring municipality of Charlottenburg protested that it, too, was entitled to a portion of the proceeds, as the finder lives in Charlottenburg. Both municipalities base their claims on the ground that Kugelmann has "inherited" a taxable fortune. More Thrills for Kaiser. The remarkable utterances of the Kaiser in the course of a recent visit to a Benedictine abbey and his gift of a huge, solid silver crucifix to the prior, have exercised foreign ministers everywhere. He is clever, his culture is high, but he has a side to his nature that sometimes puzzles. I do not see why his pronouncement in favor of Catholicism should amaze any one. It is not the head of the Catholic church in Prussia? When Prince Max of Saxony took for the see of Strasbourg William tried pleasure in bestowing his tutor. The hurburgher that looks in the bottom of the emperor's mind too often draws a veil from his eyes, won a victory without expending a copper on the payment of agents, literature, postage, printing, or even on the issue of polling cards.

Severe Seismic Shock. A violent earthquake was recorded on the seismograph apparatus of Mungret college, Limerick. So violent was it that all the instruments were demounted. Kingdom of Greece is Waking Up to Modern Methods Army, Navy and Police Force to Be Reorganized by Officers from Other Nations. ATHENS, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—Greece proposes to reorganize her army, navy and police on the most modern European lines. General Eydoux, of the French army is coming shortly to reorganize the army. An English rear admiral is coming shortly to reorganize the navy. Another officer of the same high rank in the engineering department is also coming to take charge of the arsenal. Two other officers of lower rank will follow, and in time it will be decided, if there is need, for other British officers to come to completely place the Greek navy upon an efficient foundation. The Italian government has been approached by the Greek minister in Rome to ask its aid in reorganizing the police and the gendarmerie, but so far nothing has been decided.

Germany has not been forgotten, for the Greek government has begged her to send one of her best professors from Saxony to help the new ministry of agriculture to draw up some schemes regarding land and properties throughout the kingdom. AUSTRALIANS DRAWING THE COLOR LINE ON SHIPS Strong Movement to Stop Employment of Colored Crews on Trade-Ships. SYDNEY, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—The Australian movement against the employment of colored crews on vessels trading to Commonwealth and New Zealand ports is extending, and the dominion premier has intimated the intention of his government to deal with the matter this session, it being proposed to extend the New Zealand coastal law to Australia and the Pacific islands. It is also intended to deal with Asiatic crews coming on ocean-going vessels and interfering with ships manned by white seamen.

SPANISH WOMEN LOSE RIGHTS

Minister of Interior Issues Edict Barring Them from Participation in Bull Fights. MADRID, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—The Spanish minister of the interior has issued an edict prohibiting women from taking part in bull fights, a practice which was inaugurated some time ago by a young woman named Reverts, who had great success in the arena.

ORANGEMEN STILL RAMPANT

Nationalists Brutally Assaulted and One is Killed. VIEWS OF A PROTESTANT BISHOP Rev. Dr. Elliott Assents the Extremists Opposing Home Rule Are Putting Themselves in an Absurd Position.

BY THOMAS KEMMETT. DUBLIN, Jan. 28.—(Special to The Bee.)—The Orangemen and their Tory allies are as violent and rampant as ever. They recently assassinated Thomas McCloy in South Down. McCloy and two fellow nationalists were assaulted on the night before election, on the road at Rathfriland. He died from his injuries. The respectable Protestants of that section who are opposed to violence have denounced the crime. No arrests have been made. The Right Rev. Dr. Elliott, Episcopal Bishop of Kilmore, who is a Tory and opposed to home rule, has denounced the Orangemen and unionists who have been advising a revolt in case Home Rule grants Ireland the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by force of arms is not only absurd, but it is the right to govern itself. In a public letter he said: "It seems to me as if we unionists are cursed with an excess of sentiment and a dearth of common sense. If home rule comes, to talk of resisting it by