Representatives from the Omaha city ouncil, Council Bluffs, the lilinois Central railroad and Major Schulz of the United States War department, attended the meeting. The results of the deliberation was the adoption of the report from the river improvement committee placing all responsibility for the proposed improvement upon the shoulders of the War department. From Major Schulz it was learned that there is little chance of the federal government accepting the bur

John L. McCague, representing the comlittee of eleven, read the report. The point ALL FAVOR CHARTER CHANGES of the document was that Omaha, Council Bluffs, the two counties of Nebraska and lows lying on each side of the river at this point would be helpiess, legally or by popular subscription to raise any large amount of money for the work. "Your committee believes," read the report, "that the nature of these improvements are such that they are inter-state in their character and the cost of such improvements should be borne by the United States government, in line with its policy to protect water ways, especially all streams of the magnitudo and importance of the Missourl river."
