Advantage to Omaha Defense
Ruling is Against Admission of Brewers' Account Books.

Many Complexities Arise
Question of Right to Examination of Ledgers Brought Up in Long Wrangle by Attorneys in the Case.

Much argument and legal hair-splitting in the Omaha outer case terminated yesterday afternoon in a ruling by Judge Evans upholding the contention of the defense that the account books of a third party were not admissible as evidence.

The point was raised when the state attempted to bring in the books of William J. Bookoff, liquor dealer, to show the handling of the business.

At 1:30 o'clock the state started to argue the official public accountants' evidence in an action between third parties.

Before the argument had proceeded far new and more complex questions arose.

Late in the afternoon the depositions of Fred Kavan and Harry Stone were read, over the objection of the respondent.

These related the story of alleged violations and the calling of the attention of Chief Donahue to such violations.

The second technically to claim the attention of the court was whether books of account when they become memoranda of an action in which a witness participated can become evidence when the books are the property of a person other than the witness.

Again lengthy argument was held upon a question in these circumstances, namely, whether any person other than the owner can have the privilege of examining the books.

The last question to come before the court was whether a deposition of a witness who testified to facts occurring in 1909 can be read in evidence in this case.

At the adjournment of court the question had practically narrowed down to whether books which have become memoranda can be offered in evidence or can be examined by any person other than the owner, when the books are the property of neither party to the case.

Rivers and Harbors
Bill Passes Senate, Carrying $36,000,000

Bailey Says the Domestic Affairs of Texas Are None of Burton's Business.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—After three hours of consideration the senate today passed the rivers and harbors bill, carrying appropriations aggregating about $36,000,000.

While the bill was under consideration Senators Burton and Bailey engaged in their annual debate over the policy of improving the harbors at Beaumont and Orange, Tex., so as to accommodate ocean-going vessels.

Mr. Bailey took exception to the Ohio senator's reflections upon the domestic affairs of his state and asserted that this matter was "none of the senator's nor of Ohio's business."

The course of the board of army engineers in pronouncing against the two projects on the ground of commercial unprofitability was severely condemned by Mr. Bailey.

He said senators and representatives desiring certain improvements were compelled to stand outside committee room doors with hat in hand and wait while army engineers were allowed to abuse the rights of the senators and members from any given state to say what river and harbor improvements are necessary within its borders.

The other confirmation was that of Representative Walter I. Smith, who was named to succeed Judge Willis Vandevanter, who was promoted to the supreme court of the United States.

Notwithstanding the contest made against Judge Hunt by the committee on judiciary, confirmation was not opposed in executive session of the senate today.

In the case of Judge Smith of Iowa a separate vote was demanded by Senator Bristow, but the Kansas senator was this morning regarded as the confirmation.

Nothing, now, in the way of the organization of the commerce court. Martin A. Knapp, former chairman of the Interstate Commerce commission, who was named as the presiding judge of the new tribunal, was confirmed before the holiday recess.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Five of President Taft's appointments of United States circuit court judges were confirmed by the senate today.

She Ministers to Sufferers
Visiting Nurse Tells Story of the Rounds of a Day.

Fighting Want and Neglect
Missions of Mercy Carry Her Into Scenes of Distress in Many Quarters—Issue the Annual Report.

The story of a typical day with a visiting nurse is told by Miss Louise McPherson, president of the Visiting Nurse association, in the fourteenth annual report just issued.

The story begins with the nurse's first call at 8 o'clock to a mother and her baby, and tells of her ministrations there. Next there is a typhoid case to be ministered to.

There is then a visit in response to a call from the truant officer.

Two little boys, brothers, have been absent, and on investigation, the association has been asked to take them in charge.

There being no medical inspection of schools here, more's the shame to us," the reporter writes.

At home after questioning the mother and the children, the nurse suspects adenoids in one case and defective sight in the other, and makes arrangements to take them to be examined the following day.

"Now it is nearly noon, and as it chances to be one of the dispensary days at the social settlement, the nurse goes down to see what the hours will bring forth.

"One woman, with a badly burned hand, is there to have it dressed; another has been coming in for weeks to have the broken veins in her leg banded and soon will need no further care; a baby is brought, whose eyes are in a dreadful condition, under the nurse's direction, the nurse cleanses them and instructs the mother how to guard against the other children being infected.

One man comes whose crushed hand is almost healed, and after giving him his final dressing, the dispenser bids him good-bye.

"The duties of the nurse in this neighborhood, however, are not over, because it happens to be Thursday, and in the evening the nurse will return for her class of eight or ten mothers who come to learn, by demonstration, the simple things in ear-pain, how to do in cases of sudden faintness, or of bad burns or cuts, and so on—a very useful part of the day's work.

Fort Dodge—While an obnoxious clerk went to the rear of a local store to fasten buttons on old shoes for a woman who had come in to buy a pair of shoes, an expensive new pair, and had another pair of fine dress shoes under her arm, the woman, who had been waiting for some time, is planning to leave strange purchasers unshod, hereafter, when he goes away to make repairs.

Denison—The case of E. F. Eicher, a farmer living near Manning, making damages from Carroll county for injuries sustained by falling with his team through a bridge, is on trial in district court on a charge of insanity, claiming that he is mentally disabled from the fall. A Crawford county jury gave him large damages in a similar trial, and afterwards reversed by the supreme court. Ex-Attorney General Biers has been the attorney for the plaintiff, and is here now. He is assisted by Conner & Lally.
