Regarding physical valuation, capitalizathe senator said:

I do not may that the capitalization of railroads represents more than the volume of the property, but I do say it represents millions more than the capital invested Possibly the commission may enter upon this almost continuous work of supervision and regulation:

"One thing to do, and that immediately, is a extend the federal power over all rail cad capital engaged in the business of in earriers so that there shall not be a dollar that does not represent either honest investment in either old property or enlargement or betterment. I insist that capitalization has something to do with priests in attendance asked the achbishop rates. I believe that a proper valuation of railroad property will be made, but it is a work of long durations and in the meantime the government should impose restrictions on any further dishonest capitsligation. The regulation of cates, continued the Wanamaker was leaving the archbishop speaker, was the regulation of competition, n task which congress had also shouldered in passing the Sherman act, which he Mr. Wanamaker was deeply affected added, "has not accomplished its end,"
