NEW YORK STOCKS AND BONDS

Hesitation and Irregularity Still Prevails to Some Degree.

SPECULATION INCLINED TO HALT

Progress Toward Prosperity, While Certain, is Likely to Be Slow This Year—Warnings from Steel Trade Circles.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—There was enough hesitation and irregularity in the stock market last week to suggest that speculation was inclined to halt and take stock of what had been accomplished towards placing prices on the new levels called for by changed conditions of affairs.

At the same time there were occurrences which served to admonish sentiment of the limitations to be counted on in the improvement going on. There was a recurrence in consequence of the opinions prevalent at the first of the year that progress towards prosperity, while certain, was likely to be slow this year.

From steel trade circles were heard warnings against too sanguine expectations of the further growth of demand. The January improvement indicated by the showing of unfilled orders on hand with the United States Steel corporation on February 1 was accepted as confirmatory of the betterment outlined by the chairman of the board of the week before.

This information, having been public property for that length of time has become the basis of speculative action in the market already. The unfavorable statistics of the copper producers, associating owing to the sympathetic strike influences liable to be felt between the metal trades, led to a feeling of conservatism in the steel trade.

On the side of the money market, the reasonable waiting of the influx of funds from interior markets to reserve centers showed that the most favorable period for new capital issues might be regarded as passing. Much important financing is known to remain.

The limitations to be considered in the investment supply of capital therefore came up for renewed consideration, coupled with realization of steps accomplished in that field since the favorable turn in conditions with the new year. A firm tone in foreign exchange was attributed to placing of New York credits abroad in compliance with the more favorable rates offered there.

Part of these credit resources were employed by foreigners to secure holdings of new capital issues offered here. These transactions provide a potential source for deferred benefits to the New York money market. Sustained volume of cotton exports was shown by the government figures for January, and gave the way for another foreign trade return favorable to the New York money market.

Export demand for cotton has not been so active in the growing collection of the size of the crop. A size of 15 points in the London cotton exchange, number 10 average commodity, prices on February 1 in connection with declining commodity prices in the United States has a bearing on the adjustment in progress of the abnormal trade movements and unusual export value of our imports during the early part of last year.

The partial snow covering for the winter wheat crop provided by weather conditions made a reassuring factor in the financial markets.

Clearing House Bank Statement. NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The statement of clearing house banks for the week shows that the banks hold $2,354,000 more than the requirements of the 23 per cent reserve rule. This is an increase of $71,750 in the proportion of cash reserve as compared with last week. The statement follows:
