New Books

THE MARRIED MISS WORTH. by Louise Chester Hale; 396 pp.; $1.20; Harper & Brothers.
A story of stage folk. The comedy of an all-night rehearsal, the pathos of the one-night stands, the domestic side of life behind the scenes—all are here. A husband and wife—both temperamental actors—go in separate companies on his refusal to take an inferior part in a company with her; but all ends happily.

THE ROMANCE OF A MONK. by Alice King; 296 pp.; $1.20; The Metropolitan Press.
A wealthy young Englishwoman is, during a temporary residence in Rome, brought under the influence of a Franciscan monk, whose course of Lenten sermons she attends, and whose indifference to her beauty first pleases, then leads her to a half-serious resolve to win his admiration. The denouement is striking and original.

NAVA. by Elizabeth Eggleston Hinman; 296 pp.; $1.20; Houghton Mifflin & Co.
A story of the Big Horn country which tells the attempt of some Blackfoot Indians to retain the grandchild of their chieftain. Attractively illustrated with frontispiece in color.

COLONEL TUDHUNTER OF MISSOURI. by Ripley D. Sanders; 296 pp.; $1.50; Bobbs-Merrill Company.
The appeal of this book lies in its character drawing and in its local color. Colonel Tudhunter always has a fight on whether it is a fight to elect his friend governor, or a fight to save his daughter's lover from the gallows, or a fight with his irate parent when he has rashly aided an elopement. "The next best thing, sub, to living victorious," says Colonel Tudhunter. "Is dyin' game."

MASTER AND MAID. by L. Allen Barker; 315 pp.; $1.25; Charles Scribner's Sons.
The lively and charming love story of a bewitching Irish girl who is put under the charge of the head-master of an English school. It is a very pretty yarn and eminently gratifying to those who have a taste for light-hearted fiction.

JIM HANDS. by Richard Washburn Child; 358 pp.; $1.25; The Macmillan Company.
Jim Hands is a New England character whose kindly philosophy of life and apt and quaint sayings endear him to his acquaintances. He tells the story of an old-fashioned family in an old-fashioned town, with its mill, its boss and self-respecting workmen. Interspersed in the love story of the son of the boss for the foreman's daughter, ending after many vicissitudes in a happy marriage.

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH GENERAL-OGIES. Library of Congress; $1.00; Washington Government Printing Office.
This catalogue contains titles of American and English genealogies received prior to May 1, 1910, and a few later accessions incorporated while the work was in progress. Articles or notices on families which have appeared in periodicals or collective works, and works of a genealogical nature classified with local history or biography have, with a few exceptions, been omitted. The works are arranged alphabetically by names of families and under each family chronologically.

HISTORY OF THE SHERMAN LAW. by Albert H. Walker; 312 pp.; The Equity Press.
A detailed account of the incidents of the passage of the law which is generally known as the Sherman law, although the language was written by Senator Hoar, and its application to particular cases during twenty years of litigation in every part of the country.

ANCIENT MYTHS IN MODERN POETS. by Helen A. Clarke; 296 pp.; $1; The Baker & Taylor Company.
The first half of the book takes the Prometheus myth from the earliest days down to Shelley, showing the development from primitive ideas to the philosophical conception of the nineteenth century poet. The second half deals with the sun and moon myths from the Homeric hymns to Keats.

AN OBERLAND CHALET. by Edith Elmer Wood; 296 pp.; $1; Wessels & Bissell Company.
An interesting account of a summer's tramping in the high Alps. The author describes much of the territory visited by the "dozy" who "doze" Switzerland, but also gives an insight of the customs and daily life of the people.

FUNDAMENTALS IN EDUCATION. ART AND CIVICS, by George Lansing Raymond; 245 pp.; $1.00; Funk & Wagnalls Company.
Principles and methods as to education, art and civics, which is believed should prevail generally. The book appeals to lovers of the best things in life.

JEANNE D'ARC, THE MAID OF FRANCE. by Mary Rogers Baum; 292 pp.; $1.25; Houghton Mifflin Company.
The story of Joan of Arc is here told simply and directly. Extremes of interpretation have been avoided. The author's power of description and her attractive style is appealing and make her work sympathetic and authoritative.

THE MIRACLE OF RIGHT THOUGHT. by Orison Swift Marden; 29 pp.; $1; Thomas Crowell & Co.
This work is the second on new thought lines written by Dr. Marden. The author endeavors to show the way out of the region of anxiety and worry and enable man to make of himself everything he longs to become.

JESUS AS PROBLEM-TEACHER. PERSONALITY, FORCE, by D. W. Bornemann; 22 pp.; $1; Funk & Wagnalls Company.

The author of this volume belongs to a new school of so-called modern theology, the followers endeavoring to work out problems in theology by employing methods of modern science.

LORDS OF INDUSTRY. by Henry Demarest Lloyd; 246 pp.; $1.50; G. F. Putnam's Sons.
The essays which constitute this volume are devoted to the exposure and condemnation of certain abuses in industry and in politics and to the championship of the rights and the aspirations of the masses. They should interest all thoughtful students of present-day conditions.

THE WORLD'S CHILDHOOD. by Louis Albert Banks; 263 pp.; $1.20; Funk & Wagnalls Company.
This volume is made up of thirty sermons, with texts taken from the first three chapters of the book of Genesis.

BOOMING HOPPER FOR PRESIDENCY OF T. P. A.
Traveling Men Seeking More Members to Add to Voting Power of Nebraska Delegation.

A campaign to land Charles L. Hopper of Omaha, state secretary of the Travelers' Protective Association, in the office of president of the organization at the national convention to be held in Philadelphia in June is now under way.

The organization has 1500 members in the state and 200 in Omaha. One delegate to each 100 members is allowed in the national convention. In order to gain for the Nebraska movement all the votes possible a membership campaign has been made part of the general movement of the west in behalf of Hopper.

Thad Howe of Chicago, a former president, is expected to come to Omaha to help in the movement. V. J. Schoenecker, Jr., of Milwaukee, a national director, is already in the city. A theater party for the national officers was given Friday night.

A Burning Shame.

Educational Value of Music Settled

Study of the Piano One of the Great Moral Forces of the Day.

More than 400 years ago Leonardo Da Vinci, who like Alexander Von Humboldt, was master of all the arts and sciences of his day, wrote: "No man's education is complete without a knowledge of music." Da Vinci, though better known to the present generation as a painter, was a musician and a pedagogue, and in all respects was one of the most noted figures of the Renaissance. Not only was he one of the greatest painters, sculptors, architects and engineers of his day, but he was also one of the best educated men of all time, having cultivated successfully anatomy, botany, mathematics, astronomy, poetry and music.

The views of one so highly accomplished are always interesting, and Da Vinci's avowal that a musical education was conducive of good morals and a broader humanity are significant; for in addition to his great ability as a scholar and an artist, one great feature of the man which made him the most shining light of his age and career is this—he was a good man. What he has to say, therefore, regarding the relation of music to morals will likewise be of interest.

It can be stated, as a general principle, that a musical nature can do no wrong, and it is true that those endowed with a great love of music have seldom, if ever, done anything wrong. It would be difficult to think of Frederick Schumann, Chopin or Beethoven as a burglar, forger, murderer or thief. Therefore, Da Vinci's views regarding the value of music as a part of a thorough education is significant, particularly because he may be said to have been the father of the modern idea of our societies for the prevention of cruelty to men and beasts. Da Vinci was so genial and of a nature so sympathetic that to witness suffering of any kind gave him the keenest pain. In Venice, where he lived, he made it his business to buy all aged pigeons and other birds exposed for sale, in order that these friendly winged creatures might be released, and this kindly man thought so much of music as a humanizing art that he made it the key-stone of all practical education.

Da Vinci was master of nearly all the musical instruments then known. Had the piano and piano-player been known in his time, enough is known of his thoughts to justify the statement that he would be among the strongest advocates of these instruments, because the piano and the organ is the one form of musical instrument in which both harmony and melody can be so well combined.

Because of the great popularity of the piano it is no exaggeration to say that it exercises a most humanizing influence in the world today. Not only did Da Vinci look upon music as a great moral and educational force, but the ancient Greeks classed music with charity, good taste and good manners, as an accomplishment necessary to fit one for the best in social and civic life. Today it can be truly said that a musical community is a genial and congenial community, and that the musical family is a good and happy family. Indeed, the Greeks are father of the theory, since verified by experience, that no one's education is complete without some knowledge of music. That idea pervades all of the platonic dialogues and nearly the whole body of Greek literature of the golden age. Socrates, the father of modern science and education, advised the study of the flute, the lyre, the harp and the cithara, so we have it from two of the world's greatest men and thinkers that music is an ennobling humanizing and educational influence, first Da Vinci's saying, "No man's education is complete without a knowledge of music," and again Socrates, "For if a man knows nothing of music he is still ignorant."

Texas Cattleman Object.
FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 17.—The Texas Cattle Raisers' association today sent requests to Texas congressmen to oppose the Canadian reciprocity bill on the ground that it would work to the detriment of the stockmen.
