Character Parties

The same impulse which at this season of the year makes the amateur theatrical performance popular has its useful expression in the "costume parts" In the search for novelty the idea of stopping out, for a little while, of one's own character and impersonating a loss serious being, hus a strong appeal.

These costume parties, which have been exceedingly provalent recently, were inaugurated by the colonial parties inspired by Washington's birthday. A costume party will be given this evening by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. H. Walker at their home. This will be a "hard times" party. The guests have been requested to put ande their dignity and come in the costume of hoboes and anaches.

One of the most unusual entertainments was that given last evening by Major and Mrs. Atkinson at the Officers' club at Fort Crook. The guests each represented some costume were won by Mrs. Griffith, who afternoon and the second Wednesday aftercopied her costume from the picture of the noon the old colored mammy representing "Aunt Jemima's Pancake Flour," and by Lieuten-ant Hartigan in the costume of a little girl, "Have You a Fairy in Your Home?"
