Italian Police Have Extended Confession of Member of Camorra

Sensational Revelations Will Materially Assist in Gathering Evidence to Convict Gang.

VITERBO, Italy, Tuesday, Feb. 21.—The authorities are in possession of a detailed confession by Gennaro Abbate-maggio, one of the forty-one alleged members of the Camorra, whose trial for the murder of Gennaro Cuocolo and his wife, "the beautiful Sorrentina" is set for March 5.

Dependence is not placed wholly on the revelations made to secure convictions, but the statement of the man has been of great assistance to the police as a guide for their efforts in collecting evidence. A case in point was his declaration that the assassins had been instructed to report the success of their mission to Enrico Alfano, the alleged head of the Camorra, at the Mimi-A-Mare, an inn at Torre Del Greco, where he had arranged to dine that night.

The investigation of detectives disclosed that Alfano was at the inn, as Abbate-maggio said, and that while he was dining with a party of friends he was approached by two men who carried bloodstained coats upon their arms. They saluted "Erricone," as Alfano is known, and said: "It is done." Whereupon the chief drew a deep breath and gave each a glass of wine.

So circumstantial was the proof of this happening that Erricone did not deny it, but explained the affair by saying that the men were two poor fellows who had come to salute him and that he could do no less than give them a drink.

When pressed further Erricone said: "Yes, I was at the Mimi-A-Mare, being a habitué of the place. What harm was there in my going thence with good friends, especially as it is a place where the freshest of fish and breezes are to be found? Was it my fault that the last time I went there unfortunately coincided with the day and hour when some mal-factors had chosen to commit murder?"

The subsequent arrest of Erricone and several associates was the cause of popular rejoicing which gave way to indignation when he was later released through the connivance of the priest, Circe Vittoresi, who is now a prisoner himself, charged with being a member of the Camorra.
