The body of Pat O'Conner, who died at his home at Pacific Junction Thursday, will be brought this morning at 10 o'clock for burial in St. Joseph's cemetery. He was 79 years old, and had lived there for forty years. For a number of years he had been deaf and blind, but patient under his afflictions. He was not thought to be seriously ill until the day before his death, when he laid down his pipe, which he had knoked every day for a great many years, and told his friends his time had come, that he would never take up his pipe again. One daughter, Mrs. C. Nixon, whose busband is one of the veteran employes of Groneweg & Schoenigen, resides here.

At the station to greet him, besides several of the diplomats resident here, was Enrique C. Creel, Mexican minister of foreign relations.

Minister Creel brought a message of greeting from President Diaz. The ambassador authorized the following statement: "My mother is still critically ill and her recovery can hardly be expected. However, public considerations should prevail over private ones. I thought it my duty on account of unsettled conditions here to return to my post without delay.

"Relative to the situation in Mexico and on the border I have nothing to add or subtract from the statement made by President Taft and Secretary of War Dickinson, which seemed to me to be sufficiently clear and precise. "I hope and believe that order and peace will soon be restored in Mexico and I anticipate no interruption of the cordial relations which exist between the two re-
