Fifteen Men Inclaerated.

The upsetting of a lamp set fire to one of the immense barges which are moored across the canals every winter and used as skating rinks. Fifteen workmen who were sleeping in the barge were burned to death after a desperate fight for life. Fourieen escaped by rushing out, with the thermometer at nearly zero, in their nuclat clothing. The catastrophe occurred at & fashionable rink on the Fontanka canal, greatly patronized by the staffs of the foreign eminasies and their ladies. A watchman dropped a lamp in the kitchen. The flames conched a large off can standing near by: a violent explosion ensued, and in a moment the kitchen was ablane The watchman woke up the sleepers, of whom fourteen rushed out on to the quay without any hoots and practically undressed, with the thermometer nearly at zero. Two firemen were killed, many persons were suffocated and many bodies bore bruises and signs of struggle.
