not gathered up the dead from the rebel trenches as yet, but later we will give you this information.

The correspondent passing in the streets of Agua Prieta, saw a few bodies of rebels lying on the streets. There were everywhere evidence of yesterday's fighting and many signs that the federalists had information of the strongholds occupied by the rebel force.

Main Towers Shot Into Slices

The main towers at the bull ring entrance were literally shot into slices. Thousands of bullets pierced them. For a time the machine guns poured lead steadily into these towers and over the tops of the adobe walls, from which the garrison was firing.

In the west of the bull ring were two bodies. One was that of an American. At the entrance to the first story of the tower was a rivulet of drying blood which poured out through the doorway and into the dust of the bull ring.

Sitting against the west wall of the bull ring and heavily guarded by Mexican troops was a lone American. He was working away with the retreating rebel army. His hands were tied with ropes which passed over his shoulders.

"They are not going to shoot me, are they?" he asked, terrified. He said his name was Thomas Sullivan; that he was born in Connecticut; that he last worked at Cananea, and that he came to Douglas from Blaine. He said that he had crossed the Mexican line yesterday, been arrested by the rebels, robbed of $100, forced to display the scarlet ribbon on his arm and had been driven into the fighting line. He still wore his scarlet ribbon today.

Rebels Go for Cartridges

The rebels evacuated Agua Prieta because they had exhausted their ammunition. That was apparent from the stories related by one or two who did not flee and by the federalists who entered the town. Great quantities of empty cartridges were lying everywhere in the streets and in the ruins of the town. The rebels apparently had used their ammunition unhesitatingly. Their firing was kept up until nearly 3 o'clock this morning.

The federalists, more amply supplied with ammunition, continued their bombardment until about 4 o'clock, principally for the purpose they say of provoking the rebels into replying and exhausting their cartridges.

As the rebels passed out of Agua Prieta to the westward one or two members of the army called across the line to the Americans.

"We are going into the mountains and will return when we get some cartridges," Alexander P. Dye, American consul at Nogales, was in Douglas all day yesterday, visited the bull ring in Agua Prieta today and conferred with the federal commanders.

His conference especially related to the reopening of the ports of Douglas and Agua Prieta. Commandante Chapa, in a blue uniform, with a red-banded straw hat, was the chief spokesman for the federalists.

Yaqul Indians brought into the bull ring early yesterday 100 horses which they had rounded up around Agua Prieta. It is supposed that these animals were abandoned by the rebels because of the casualties in their ranks and the desertions that had taken place during the night.

Two women accompanied the federal army into the town and these were busy this morning as they breakfasted in the bull ring. Before 8 o'clock the soldiers were greedily enjoying a meal of tortillas, which were baked on many fires, and coffee.

Douglas Men Believed.

The citizens of Douglas felt much relieved today over the federal occupation of Agua Prieta. They had expected instead a continuance of yesterday's bombardment and feared, not without reason, heavy casualties on this side of the line.

The federal attack on Agua Prieta yesterday and last night, though it endangered the city of Douglas, was generally credited as an admirable bit of military strategy and especially noteworthy was the skill of the Yaqui Indians who acted as cavalry.

DIAMONDS

There is sentiment to diamonds—in the giving or receiving of these stones. Every birthday, every holiday, every wedding gift, every anniversary remembrance, is an expression of sentimentality. Diamonds are the precious diamonds because of their great worth and the sentiment that they carry. When a woman is presented with a handsome diamond, she believes she has received the highest form of tribute that man can pay her—and she has. No one can give her appreciation of the quality of the woman he adores any more than he can give her the diamond that comes from his hand. Here stones are sold for their actual value. The best stones in Omaha are displayed in our cases. Years of expert dealing in these stones have given this house the title of "Diamond Store." When you wish to see the best stones visit Frenzer's. Ninety per cent of the purchase price will be refunded within one year of date of sale.

JUAREZ AWAITS ATTACK

No Prospect of Battle for Day or Two, at Least.

INSURRECTORS ARE AT SAPELLO

Madero and Orozco, with Three Thousand Men, in Camp Twenty-Three Miles South of the City.

EL PASO, Tex., April 18.—Out of the scores of conflicting rumors of firing close to Juarez last night and reports of a rebel force of 3,000 men, it is now known that the Maderista force recently stationed near Chama City, were now at Saipello, twelve miles south of Juarez, appears one concrete fact this morning. That is, there is no prospect of a battle around Juarez, for a day or two at least.

Colonel M. Tabares, commanding the federal forces in Juarez, denies the reports of firing last night in the vicinity of Juarez. Half a dozen shots were fired by American sentries near the El Paso smelter about 3 o'clock this morning for unexplained cause, and these shots give rise to the reports that the insurgents were close to Juarez and that a battle was imminent.

Dispatches received this morning from an Associated Press correspondent with the insurgents refer merely to the fight east of Juarez last Saturday, in which Oscar Creighton was killed, and say that all the rebel force, headed by Francisco I. Madero in person, are at Saipello. This is twenty-three miles south of Juarez.

Rebels Have Four Thousand Men.
According to the correspondent, the entire commands of Orozco and Blanco, numbering about 3,000 men, are in camp, while another thousand insurgents are in the Mexican National railroad to intercept any reinforcements from Chihuahua for Juarez.

The courier who brought the dispatches, a New Mexican, says there will be no fighting until tomorrow or later. He came from around the outskirts of Juarez during the night.

Captain, Escamado, according to the courier, was killed with Captain Creighton Saturday. Three federal prisoners are being held by the insurgents.

Another confusing element was added to the Juarez situation later this morning by the admission by the federal officials in Juarez that 500 insurgents had reached Saipello, thirteen miles from Juarez. They composed part of the forces under Madero, Orozco and Blanco.

But Juarez is now ready for the attack. Federal troops having completed the fortifications and mines in the region in the city, have now returned to Juarez and are digging trenches close to the heart of the city and within two blocks of the American consulate.

Bears Make Vigorous Raid on Stocks

Values of Leading Issues Drop from One to Six Points on Vigorous Selling.

NEW YORK, April 18.—The stock market broke badly today under the influence of a vigorous bear raid. National Biscuit broke 6 1/2 points, Reading, Lehigh Valley & St. Paul 3, and other stocks from 1 to 4 points.

Bear traders took advantage of the Mexican situation to inaugurate the selling movement. Various weak bull accounts were closed out and the downward movement was accelerated by uncovering of stop loss orders and liquidation by pools which recently have been manipulating certain industrial stocks.

The Endless Variety of Rug Designs

One of the marvelous things about the making of Oriental rugs is the seemingly endless variety of patterns and figures employed by the patient weavers of the Old World.

While certain districts, like Bokhara, Khiva and others, have general designs that practically all of the weavers in those districts follow, and although whole families of weavers have been copying those designs for centuries, yet each weaver tries to carry out some personal idea of fancy.

The result is a vast assortment in the most familiar types, the rugs of a given district rarely looking exactly alike.

Oriental rugs are worthy of close study as well as keen admiration. The rugs exhibited by us deserve the most careful attention, because they have been imported by us, for our exclusive use, direct from the strange countries where the weavers live. As the only importers of Oriental rugs in Omaha, we invite you to come in and inspect this rare display.

Diamond Consideration

Considering the position which the diamond occupies among precious stones, and the character it typifies in its wear, it is most natural that more care should be given in its purchase than in that of other gems. Only the most reliable dealer should be permitted to sell you this stone, for only at the most reliable dealers can you be sure of getting the intrinsic and artistic value of your money. The Edholm diamonds are gems of purity and are exact for their actual worth.
