OMAHA. May 5, 1911.

Fear of rain over the apring wheat belt on the forecast over Sunday scared longs who turned willing seliers to the extent that wheat values dropped sharply from the closing values yesterday. Cash prices were lower and cables had an easier tone and short selling of the more distant futures featured the short Saturday session. With bright clearing weather over the corn belt which will help the progress of sorn planting, coupled with the drop in wheat values, eased the corn market, closing prices being on the low point.

The wheat market opened weak lower, with the May option showing a loss of 4c from yesterday's close. Cash wheat on the floor was 3c lower.

Corn ruled firm early, but short selling was more pronounced, owing to the weak wheat market. Demand was slack and cash values 4c lower.

Frimary wheat receipts were 48,000 bu. and shipments of 84,000 bu.

The following cash sales were reported:

Asking Leading Questions Many ingenuous contestants are diecting at the contest editor what must regretfully be termed "leading ques-

"If a picture," they write, "might be answered as representing the book called The Cow's Calves, or the book called The Calves of the Cow,' which would be correct?"

Now, these contestants evidently the contest editor to tell them which of the books is the proper one to put down on that coupon. The titles cited above are fictitious, but the sort of query is not. Very many of these "leading questions" have been asked lately.

The only answer that can be given these contestants is to say that each pic-

Did you ever stop to think that the four grand prizes—the Apperson touring ear. Kimball eighty-note player-plane, $500 building lot in A. P. Tukey & Son's Her addition and a Columbia Grafonola. "Regent!"—did you ever stop to think that these are not all?

Has it ever met your eye that there are thirty-five more prizes—thirty-five cash consolation awards for these contestants who do not get any of the first four plums?

If you have looked down the list of prizes, however, you have seen the announcement of the thirty-five cash awards. There are five of $10 each, ten of $5 each, and twenty of $2 each. These prizes make it worth all your time and energy, even if you do not get one of the first four grand awards.

The names of all the winners of prizes will be printed in The Hee, with the prizes won by them. Better look over the prizes announced below the puzzle picture that appears in the issue of today.

the title of one particular book. A title in the booklovers' catalogue is selected as one that would lend itself well to illustration. Then the illustration is drawn to order by an artist, who draws only what is teld him to draw, and does not know by any means what title he is representing.

Now, if some certain picture is constitued by some certain contestant to be capable of representing more than one title, it is unfortunate, but not to be helped. The pictures are drawn to represent one title. If you cannot decide what title, you may make extra answers.

The rules permit as many as five answers to each picture. Extra answers to each picture. Extra answers must be made on extra coupons.

And, incidentally, it will cost only one cent to make each of these extra answers.

Keep cool this summer in a cool, clean office

Roomy, airy offices appeal to the business man who has a large amount of work to do each day. The cooler he is the better work he can do. Tenants of the best known office building in the city catch every breath that is blowing during the days when the mercury is mounting high. Elevator service, light, ventilation and janitor attention are the best.
