

Details of the Proper Haintment for Those Heedful of Fashion's Decrees.

A person who delivers oracular opinions as to the proper togs wherewithal a man shall be clothed describes in the Haberdasher the correct costume for Sunday wear this spring.

"The coat is snug at the waist, moderately broad at the shoulders, closed with two buttons and has a shirt loosely cut away from the lower button and reaching to the bend of the knee. The lapels are soft rolled, broad and join the collar with a triangular notch. The trousers may either match the coat fabric or be of gray striped cloth. The former is just now a bit smarter."

"If atmospheric conditions require a topcoat it, too, should be black or at least very dark. It may be either very full, hanging in ample folds from the shoulder, or the direct contrary decidedly shaped. Particular men have a black topcoat with silk faced lapels for Sunday and evening wear. A topcoat showing any noticeable color or pattern is not in good taste for either formal day or formal evening wear."

"When we come to consider collar, cravat and shirt we find two standards, both of which have current approval. Some men regard the black cutaway when employed for church and formal occasions as a semi-formal garment. They, therefore, wear with it informal accessories, a shirt with a pattern and even some color in it, a fold collar and a four-in-hand cravat. This is questionable form."

"Others conceive of the cutaway as a ceremonious garment requiring ceremonious accessories. They, therefore, wear with it a white shirt with a white cravat and a white shirt of plain linen or pique. The majority of well dressed men will compromise these views and wear a wing collar, one with small, square corners, which are sewed together at the rounded top, a pearl four-in-hand or once-over, the four-in-hand not being tightly knotted because a snug knot does not go well with a wing collar, and a white shirt, plain or pleated, or a shirt of white ground with widely spaced hairlines of black."

"Young chaps who like to kick over the traces occasionally still mark a demarcation from this modern scheme of black, white and gray by introducing color in cravat and gloves. The color will be delicate, of course—any one of the pastel tints."

"This season's waistcoat to accompany the cutaway is of the same material as the coat, relieved at the neck opening by white edging. It is cut sufficiently high to be visible an inch or two above the coat when the two buttons of the coat are fastened, and it has moderate bottom points. I would not advise the white or the gray waistcoat as in conjunction with the cutaway. But they have not fashion's endorsement for this season."

"What one wears in half hose doesn't matter much with high shoes—boots, if you prefer—because the trousers that go with the boots are not short as they used to be at the bottom after the manner of lounge trousers, so that half hose are not visible. Yet whether with shoes or oxfords the mode approves only black half hose, either plain or with self cloaking. The shoes must be of patent leather and buttoned. The socks are of fine material. 'Gloves are preferably pearl slued or pearl lace, buttoned, not clasped in jewelry the cravat pin and the links are of pearl or moonstone, and a fine watch chain of gold, gold and platinum or platinum and pearl, combining bars with the links, may be strung across the chest. The walking stick is a matter of personal liking, except that the whangee and other light sticks are restricted to summer wear."

The second stage of the work—that of filling the caissons as fast as they were completed with mud, clay and rock dredged from the harbor bottom—has been going on for some time as fast as circumstances would permit, and now that the ring of caissons is completed is being pushed forward with the utmost rapidity. The steam dredge Norman Davis, lent to the government by the Huston-Trumbo Dredging company, and the army dredge Bernard are dumping hundreds of tons of material into the caissons, the work going on, as it has from the beginning, night and day.

It is expected that the filling of the caissons will be completed by the end of April, and after that the second and most interesting stage of the work—that of pumping out the great basin and leaving exposed the hull of the battleship in precisely the condition it was in the morning after its destruction, thirteen years ago—will be taken up. First, however, a heavy timber platform will be erected on top of the caissons encircling the basin, to serve as a stage of operations and foundation for cranes and other apparatus for use when the work of raising the wreck is begun. It will also be used as a temporary resting place for the dead of the Maine as fast as the bodies are recovered.

As soon as the wreck is fully exposed the work of exploration in search of human remains will take precedence of every other consideration. It is practically certain that when the state of the wreck is reached a United States man-of-war will be ordered to Havana and will lie close to the wreck to receive the bodies as fast as they are recovered and transport them to their final resting place.

After that will come an exhaustive scrutiny of the wreck, the work of which will be able to determine beyond all future question precisely the character of the agency whereby the destruction of the Maine was effected.

Probably many months will elapse before the final stage of the work—the extraction and disposition of the wreck—will be begun.—New York Tribune.

FAMOUS WRECK WALLED IN

Quick Work in Completing First Stage of Raising Battleship at Havana.

In the driving of the last few interlocking steel piles of the last of the twenty caissons forming the inclosing wall of the great basin or cofferdam surrounding the wreck of the Maine the first stage in the work of exposing and ultimately removing the shattered remains of the battleship sunk in the harbor of Havana on the night of February 15, 1898, has just been brought to a successful conclusion.

The second stage of the work—that of filling the caissons as fast as they were completed with mud, clay and rock dredged from the harbor bottom—has been going on for some time as fast as circumstances would permit, and now that the ring of caissons is completed is being pushed forward with the utmost rapidity. The steam dredge Norman Davis, lent to the government by the Huston-Trumbo Dredging company, and the army dredge Bernard are dumping hundreds of tons of material into the caissons, the work going on, as it has from the beginning, night and day.

REAL ESTATE FARM AND RANCH LAND FOR SALE

FOR SALE—197 acres, being a portion of my Norwood Park ranch, 1/2 mile south of Pueblo, under the Homestead Act. The land is planted in alfalfa. The ranch has been under cultivation for many years, each of the land having been in alfalfa for approximately 12 years previous to three years ago. When I plowed up the alfalfa and put the ground into sugar beets. During the past year, 200 acres of alfalfa has been raised and the balance in wheat and oats; the wheat produced 60 bushels to the acre, the oats 30 bushels to the acre, and the sugar beet land an average of possibly 100 to the acre. It all lies in one level tract. An interior line is now surveying across the ranch and I am reliably informed will build this summer. Every foot of it can be irrigated. I considered the cheapest piece of land in one tract under the ditch. The Bessmerer ditch is one of the oldest, and the water is of the best character. The ditch stock has a ready market value of $100 per share. The land is for sale at $100 per acre, 20 percent cash; 20 percent in one, two and three years. J. H. JENKINS, Sec'y Chamber of Commerce, Pueblo, Colo.
