Learn Many Interesting Things Concerning Management of Cedar Rapids Plant.

Water Commissioners J. Chris Jensen and S. T. McAtee returned yesterday from their little educational jaunt to Cedar Rapids and Marshalltown, where they went Tuesday to take their first lessons in the management of a municipal water plant. They acquired much valuable information in the short time they were gone and returned fully satisfied with their tutors and the schools, They found that Cedar Rapids was paying its water works superintendent $2,500 a year, and that he had been at his post for thirty-two years, under both private and municipal ownership. The superintendent devoted one whole day to the Council Bluffs men, explaining all of the details of the plant's operation, methods of keeping accounts, and other things in line with the duties of the new commissioners. The Cedar Rapids commissioners took them over the city in the police automobile and likewise did all possible to impart desired information. In the eight years Cedar Rapids has owned its water plant it has paid $300,000 of the $500,000 purchase price and spent $300,000 for extensions and improvements, making the plant now worth practically $4,000,000. The Council Bluffs men returned more enthusiastic than ever over nunicipal ownership.
